The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

"We go the distance for you."

See The Whale

Pay Your Money And See The Whale They Towed From Amagansett To New York

By Dan Rattiner

Scientists say that Staten Island was once underwater. How they came to know this, in a discovery made about thirty years ago, is the subject of this article.

In the late seventies, some surfcasters discovered a huge right whale, about eighty feet long, dead on the beach between Amagansett and Montauk. The authorities were called in – this was at a time when the environmental movement was just getting started in America – and there on the beach alongside the whale there was discussion about what to do with the whale and how to do it. Options seemed limited.

At this point, a man came forward and said he was an entrepreneur, had produced many shows and fairs, and if it were okay with the authorities, he would remove the whale that very day and take charge of it. He thought he might have a use for it. The authorities agreed.

What this man had in mind, in retrospect, was one of the stupidest things imaginable. He would take the whale to New York City, and there on a railroad siding, charge customers $10 to see it. A flatbed truck was hired, the whale was Later that morning, this man drove to Jamaica and visited with another man who owned an awning business in that community. The two sat together in the awning business office and discussed what the man needed, which was a series of fabric curtains, ten feet high and thirty feet long – that could be unrolled and attached to some scaffolding to enclose the whale. A portable booth would be set up. The man would advertise the attraction. And people would come and pay their money and go through the small opening in the curtain and see the whale.

This second man – he was the man who told me this story last week – stated a price for the awnings. It was too high. The first man said the whale is on its way. If he lowered the price, he would make him an equal partner. They would share the profits fifty-fifty.

“Instead, I headed for a wooded part of Staten Island I knew, where there were dirt roads we go down.”

winched up onto the back of it, and it was taken to the Amagansett Railroad Station where there were arrangements for a railroad car to take it into New York City. It was to be taken off at a railroad siding near Jamaica.

awnings. It was too high. The first man said the whale is on its way. If he lowered the price, he would make him an equal partner. They would share the profits fifty-fifty.

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Lee Radziwill, the sister of the late Jackie Kennedy Onassis, has sold her oceanfront home in East Hampton near the Maidstone Club for $19 million. The buyer is Boston based Thomas Lee, who paid the Radziwill-Ross's $500,000 to stay there last summer and who offered the same $19 million that Jerry Seinfeld offered two years ago, a deal which ultimately fell apart. Radziwill and her husband Herb Ross are divorcing after many years, and though Radziwill has spent every summer in East Hampton for almost all her life, the time, it seemed, had come to move on. Buyer Lee is a buyout specialist whose companies include Snapple, Rayovac and Experian. His net worth, according to Forbes magazine, is $900 million.

Regular runners in the Dan's Papers Potatompton Minithon should note that this year the gun will sound to start the 10k run on Saturday morning of Memorial Day weekend in Bridgehampton rather than that time on Sunday morning. Question not answered - will Rick Morani, who has run in it in past years, run in it this year? Another question: will Dan's Papers publisher Dan Rattiner bring his ancient 59 Triumph TR-3 to lead the runners down either the wrong or right roads?

Wall Street's Dixon Boardman will be getting married in Marbella next month to Princess Arianna von Hohenlohe and we wish them well.

Philanthropist Henry Ostberg of Southampton is setting up a fund to aid the war victims of Sierra Leone who need prosthesis and therapy.

Whale

The whale arrived, the fabric curtains went up, the portable booth arrived and the advertising was put into the Post and the News. Three days passed. Maybe ten people came.

At this point, something else, which they should have thought of in the first place, began to happen. The neighbors living within a quarter of a mile of this attraction started to complain about the odor. Officials from the New York City Department of Sanitation came down. Summonses were issued. The whale carcass would have to be removed.

The two men, partners now, tried heroically to find a way to dispose of the whale. The New York Aquarium would have no part of it. The garbage dump would have no part of it. The railroad would have no further part of it. As a matter of fact, they wanted their flatbed railroad car back. If it weren't back in three days, they were going to start charging rent for it.

"The next morning," the awning man told me, "I went to the office of my partner and he was gone. Files, papers, cash drawers, everything. I didn't know what to do. But as the hours went by, I realized I would just have to bite the bullet. I would have to do whatever it was I had to do."

By nightfall, the awning man had hired ten of the lowest of the lowlifes he could find, armed them with machetes, brought in a bulldozer and two dump trucks, and had them go at the whale. They worked through the night. By morning, the whale, now cut up into pieces, was in the back of the two dump trucks covered with canvas. At 9 a.m., the awning man returned, paid the ten exhausted machete men, and then led the two dump trucks, with a driver and two workmen in each of the cabs, across the Verazanno Bridge to Staten Island.

"Of course I wasn't headed for the big Fish Kill Dump there. What I had in those trucks would never get past the guards.

"Instead, I headed for a wooded part of Staten Island I knew, where there were dirt roads we could go down."

Deep in the woods, the awning man, the two drivers and the four workmen worked for the next eight hours, digging a deep hole, backing up the dump trucks and emptying them of their contents, and then covering it all up.

"We wore masks over our faces, but even with the masks, there was no getting away from the smell," the awning man told me. "It was one of the worst days of my life."

Nevertheless, by late in the day the job was done. Everyone went home.

"Now it is two years later," the awning man is telling me, "and I am sitting in a cafe in Manhattan reading The New York Times when I read a small article on about page 12 that says construction on the foundation of an apartment house complex in Staten Island has been halted because of a discovery of dinosaur bones. They are going to call in some experts from the Museum of Natural History.

"Two days later, there's another article. The experts have determined that the bones are whale bones. And this proves beyond a shadow of a doubt what the scientists had expected all along, that Staten Island was once under water."

I am sitting in a booth in the Estia Restaurant in Amagansett when he tells me this. Neither of us say anything for a very long time. Both of us know there was no way for this man, during the last twenty years, to come forward and say no, those are some whale bones from Amagansett. I trucked them there. They prove nothing. No way. He is unburdening himself to me.

"The reason I am telling you this story," the man says, "is because last week, in reading your paper, I read the story you made up about Long Island, as part of the continental drift theory, swimming across the Atlantic from Ireland by flipping the fluke tails of the east end. This was such an outrageous story it made me think of my Staten Island whale adventure. I hadn't thought about this in years. I wanted to tell this story to you."

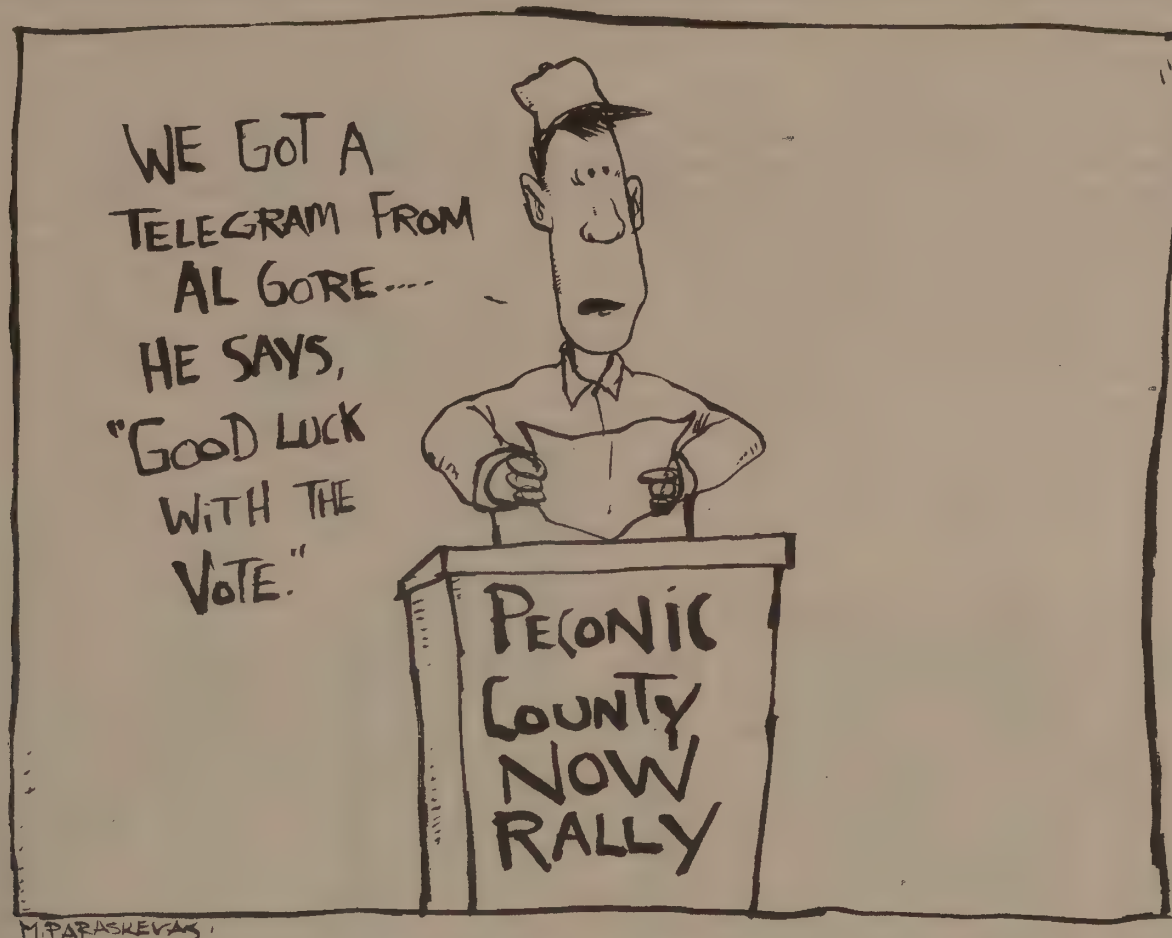

We got up, paid the bill, and left. I told him I would write this tale and leave his name out. So this is what I did.

Perhaps this sets the record straight about geology and Staten Island. I don't know. Years ago, I was drawing a road map of the east end which I hoped to sell, and did sell, in gas stations around the island. I had a lot of roads, mostly dirt roads, that had no names. So I named a few. One of them I named Lois Lane. Another I named Werewolf Path. Ten years later, the town paves this dirt road and a developer comes in and there are road signs up today. Werewolf Path.

Maybe Staten Island WAS once underwater. •

Down With Suffolk!

Craft, Competition, Shoddy Construction And Now The East End Has To Pay For It

By Dan Rattiner

People who come out to the Hamptons from Manhattan are often shocked to learn that we are not masters of our own affairs. They think of us as a bunch of classy, handsome, well-heeled communities. Surely, villages with such magical names as Sag Harbor, Amagansett, East Hampton, Southampton and Westhampton Beach, known throughout the world, would not allow themselves to be taken over and run by a bunch of outsiders from the west.

But that is exactly what has happened. And though there have been attempts over the years to regain the control lost all those years ago, all have failed. But, a recent attempt, announced just last month by our State Assemblyman Fred Thiele, (D., Sag Harbor) might have better prospects.

The loss of control occurred in 1972. Until that time, the whole East End of Long Island, from the Nassau County Line to Montauk Lighthouse, was run by a Board of Supervisors, one from each of the towns that make up Suffolk County. There were five votes from the five eastern towns, East Hampton, Southampton, Southold, Riverhead and Shelter Island. And there were four votes from the four western towns, Brookhaven, Islip, Smithtown, Huntington and Babylon. It seemed fair that the East End had one more vote. There was more land area to the East End and the East End was far more beautiful. And so that's the way it was for the County of Suffolk. When it came time to build a County Center, it got built in Riverhead.

There was a rebellion in 1970. The West End politicians, noting that the West End towns were now far more populous than the East End ones, and licking their chops when they looked at the

Their biggest interest in the East End, of course, is the money. So the first thing the West End politicians did was announce the creation of a Southwest Sewer District for Islip Township and funnel all the East End money in to make it happen. So much graft and swindling took place doing this project that many people were arrested and went to jail. Ten years later, it was still not done, and the West End had to put in a sales tax for the entire county to pay for the completion of it. With all the payoffs, it cost almost double what had been budgeted.

The next thing the politicians from the west tried to do was close down Riverhead and build a new county center in the West End, at Hauppauge. They partially succeeded. About two thirds of the county government has money flying around on the East End, decided they could use the One Man One Vote law and take it over. They did this by rejiggering the number of seats in the County Legislature so the West End had 16 votes and the east end had 2. The Supreme Court of the United States went along with this since it conformed to the one man one vote law. Thus did the East End lose control of its destiny. Politicians from the overpopulated west end of the county, with impunity, could now have their way the Hamptons and the rest of the east end.

been moved to the west. And the rest remains where it was. But perhaps the most interesting thing about the county center in Hauppauge is its centerpiece, a tall twelve story skyscraper which was so shoddily built that when they got it done they discovered that it was not straight up and down. It was subsequently shut down for a year while bracing and repairs were made. To this day it is off from true by at least two inches. But they use it.

The West End politicians created a huge and some say top heavy county police force that, after awhile, the five towns of the East End finally said they want no part of. Our individual town police forces would do just fine thank you. Stay away. And don't charge us for it. But at a subsequent meeting of the County Government, the West End politicians used their 16 to 2 leverage to lead a vote to charge the east end for 25% of it anyway. Just knowing it was there in the West End would be a deterrent against crime on the East End, I guess is what they figured.

Two big slaps in the face of the East End came just this year. For the past ten years, the East and West Ends have agreed to hold half their county meetings in Hauppauge and half in Riverhead. Last year, in Hauppauge, it was found that the "new" County Center was in such bad shape that it would have to be shut down for repairs for ten months. And so for ten months out of the twelve, all the meetings were held in Riverhead.

This year, as if it were the East End's fault all the meetings had to be held in Riverhead, the West End voted that for ten months, to make up for what had happened the prior year, all the meetings would be held in Hauppauge. The vote, as always, 16 in favor, 2 opposed.

The second slap in the face occurred just last week, when the Suffolk County Legislature signed into law a bill that would increase the county sales tax from 8 1/2% to 8 3/4%. Because of the slow economy, revenues from the sales tax have slowed down in the first quarter. And the county can't have that. To make up for the shortfall, instead of cutting back on expenses, they have jacked up the sales tax "temporarily" beginning June 1. Guess where the huge pot of retail money comes into the county beginning June 1. You guessed it.

This newspaper has long advocated forming a new East End county to break away from the Suffolk County that is now so dominated by West End politicians. It was true that a new East End county of the five towns would only have 100,000 people in it as opposed to the 1.3 million in the five western towns. But the East End county is so different, with so many different issues, and such a different mind set, it simply HAS to rule its own affairs. The newspaper held a contest to name the new county. God's County won. Then the proponents of the idea of the new county, led by State Assemblyman John Behan, held their own contest. The winner was Peconic County. So Peconic County it would be — if we could ever be allowed to break off from Suffolk County.

The first attempt, in the 1980s, failed because a State law said there had to be 110,000 people in an area to form a county. We were short 10,000 people.

A second attempt, led by State Assemblyman Thiele in the 1990s, failed because the State ruled that we would have to get the approval of the majority of the people living in the county we wanted to break away from. We knew that Suffolk County, dominated by the West End, would never do that. Give up the Goose that laid the Golden eggs? Why would they?

Now, these obstacles have been overcome. Dan's Papers is proud to have been part of the effort to get enough of its residents fertile and pregnant to overcome the 110,000 hurdle. And now, it seems the courts may rule that it's the entire State of New York we must persuade to be allowed to break away from Suffolk County, not just Suffolk County — and we believe this is fair and doable.

Fred Thiele is up in Albany, making speeches, filing papers, hoping to get this proposal on the agenda once again.

But whatever happens, Peconic County is an idea whose time has come. And for all those now wealthy residents who drive out from Manhattan and haven't a clue what I am talking about, just remember, vote YES when the time comes. I'll let you know.

Sometimes The Enemy Is Not Who You Think They Are Or Even Who They Think They Are

By Dan Rattiner

So now I learn that the British government, anxious to make joining the army there as attractive as possible, is offering free breast enlargements as part of the compensation package. Join the Army, have a boob job, stay the required three years, then leave with an honorary discharge. The breasts are yours to keep. Momentos.

So I am in the shower the other morning, I am soaping up my various body parts, and what I think about for some reason is the new perk they have for City employees in San Francisco which is that the City will pay for sex changes. I am not making this up. They just voted on this, the hands went up in the City council and now it's the law.

And I am thinking of some other things. Some scientists have announced they intend to clone a human being. They want to be first. Clone yourself. Live forever. But it won't be cheap.

And then I am thinking about the new modeling agency that has just opened up in Manhattan that, for a fee, will allow you to use the image of an entirely computer generated human being. One was just selected for a cover for Maxim Magazine. A babe. Another is going to pitch Nokia Cell Phones on TV. Another babe. You can't tell these "models" or non-battle — during the Revolutionary War when, here in Sag Harbor, the local citizenry tricked the British into postponing an invasion. Right offshore, the locals saw four British Man-o-War ships filled with armed soldiers heading toward the Wharf. What to do?

They got fifty men, gave them rifles, then had them march from one rock outcropping across a plain to another outcropping, then run around the back, change clothes and appear again as somebody else. They kept this up as an endless parade of defenders, in full, but changing, battle gear, until the British admiral became discouraged and had from the real things.

What do you do with all this information? Well, if you're smart, you can weave them all together into some sort of story for Dan's Papers, that's what. People who aren't what they seem. Or aren't there at all.

I am remembering a famous military battle —

the ships sail away.

So here's my idea for a movie plot.

The scene is a small British military outpost on the Isle of Wight, an island in the English Channel between England and France. It is the present day.

Looking through binoculars is Corporal Laramore

Smith, the commander of the small contingent of troops stationed there. He sees fifty LST landing craft heading toward the island, the kind that JFK captained in the Pacific during World War II.

"They are flying French flags, Sergeant," he tells an aide standing next to him.

"Damn," the aide says.

"Damn what?"

"Damn Sir."

"We're ready for them."

"Yes, sir."

Tensions had risen between the British and the French. The French discovered the British exporting livestock suffering from Mad Cow Disease to Le Havre, though the paperwork accompanying the livestock says they only have hemorrhoids, easily treatable with Preparation H. The French Premier has snubbed the British Prime Minister by calling him, in French, a bad name. The English have put the military on alert to Defcon Five.

Colonel Smith lowers his binoculars. He rubs his eyes.

"There seem to be beautiful women on board. Thousands of them," he says to the Sergeant.

"It's a ruse, sir."

"So it would seem. Is everyone in place? The flat chested women and the men getting the sex change?"

"They've been shaved," the Sergeant says. "And the surgeons are ready. And everyone is in uniform."

"They're coming closer."

"Can they see us?"

"If we can see them, they can see us."

"Not if they've just had laser surgery."

"Speak when you're spoken to, Sergeant."

"Yes sir."

"Yes, sir what?"

"Yes, sir sir."

In the lead LST, Lieutenant Henri Giroux gazes through French opera glasses.

"Sacre bleu," he says to his aide, a stunningly beautiful woman who looks like Goldie Hawn in the movie Private Benjamin. "There must be a thousand of them. They come from that big boulder au gauche and they march to that big boulder au droite and there are thousands of them. Soldiers with bandages around their groins. Women with big breasts. Other women with small breasts. Here, have a look."

He hands the opera glasses to the aide, but they fall to the deck.

"Oooops," Lieutenant Giroux says. "I forgot. You don't exist."

"Shall I radio to the air base yet?" the aide asks.

"Yes. Tell them its time for the paratroopers."

The beautiful aide kneels down in front of the radio sitting on the deck — she can't pick it up of course, stupid — and speaks some words in French. Behind them, way behind them, over the noise of the diesels driving the LSTs through the rough waters of the Channel, there is the sound of airplane engines revving up.

Soon there will be this diversionary clone drop on the other end of the island, behind the British lines, followed by hand to hand combat between the French 101st Duplicates Airborne and the British Male Transexual Nurses Corps guarding the tents inside which soldiers are waiting their turn to undergo liposuction. It's all over in an hour.

But what?

Tomorrow night, 9 p.m., a double episode. Don't miss it.

As Jesse James Said...

From Patchogue To Montauk, The Murderers, Gangsters And Robbers Are Lurking Around

By Dan Rattiner

A young gangster on the lam was found holed up in an apartment on the East End the other day. His name was Carmine Galente, not mob boss Carmine Galente who was shot and killed while having dinner in Manhattan back in 1979, (there is a famous photo of him dead on the floor, smeared in pasta sauce and with a cigar in his mouth.) No, this Carmine Galente was his nephew, a man wanted for having stabbed somebody to death in Brooklyn two years ago.

Police swooped in last Tuesday to his home in Mastic and hauled him off in handcuffs. Searching the premises they found a wall calendar with the days crossed off since he went on the lam, with April 4 bearing the notation "two years." Two years earlier on April 4 was the day of the murder.

They also found whips and chains and other paraphernalia of an intimate nature, and they interviewed neighbors who said they — the neighbors — had filed frequent complaints with the police about the noises made by the whips and chains and those on the premises apparently being whipped or chained. But nothing ever came of it. And that's another story.

What interested me most about this incident was just how, well, interesting, it all was. This commu-locals, including Steven Spielberg, Martha Stewart, George Soros and Carl Ichan, using a computer in his local library to transfer tens of millions of dollars this way and that before finally being caught.

Used to be, the East End was such a quiet and peaceful place. Nobody locked their doors. People left their keys in the ignition. Every night, the cops would walk up and down the

Super Bird

The Celebrity Everyone Has Been Waiting For Alights In Eastport

By Janet Berg

So, the Hamptons may have the beautiful people and the celebrities, but good 'ol Eastport, "Ducktown, U.S.A.," (just a "little" bit west of the Hamptons) has a STAR of its own genre – an extremely rare bird called the black-tailed godwit.

In the spring, as tens of thousands of birds who winter in western Europe begin making their trip back to their breeding grounds in Iceland, this large shore bird took a wrong turn and ended up in an unlikely place here on Long Island. (Talk about overshooting the runway.) This is the first sighting of the Icelandic bird in the state of New York. Also unusual is that the rare bird decided to stay around so long. With trembling fingers, a call was made to the Manhattan-based bird hotline, and things haven't been the same in Eastport since.

Our local guest of honor and exquisite visitor made its debut on Thursday afternoon, April 5, 2001 spotted a few yards southeast of the stone bridge that spans the Seatuck Creek in Eastport. What a sight – this rare species, nonchalantly standing in the low-tide marsh, wading in the shallow waters with the regulars – the Eastport ducks.

And it didn't take long before dozens of human species mimicked what was below the bridge on Montauk Highway, as they, too, stood together – avid birdwatchers and novice onlookers – gaping at the same feathered specimen in totally different that's when you can see the black on its tail." When this phenomenon took place, I winced from the high-strung turmoil.

The ornithologist's shrieks stopped traffic, clogging up this little ho-hum town made up of a gas station, a barber shop, a blues café, and many antique shops that meld together as one. I was told this one birdie made the record books, and among the crowd of onlookers were the National Audubon Society and the local and national press. National Geographic also made an appearance.

As birdwatchers may enjoy observing birds behavior, I have to admit I enjoy watching human idiosyncrasies, and

"I guess there's money in bird watching because these people were well-dressed, drove nice cars and had expensive equipment."

perspectives.

The birders, dressed in their L.L. Bean garb, hailed from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and as far away as Cincinnati, Ohio, and were loaded down with high tech cameras, telescopes and guidebooks; their mission was euphoric. If the bird so much as moved, these professionals transmitted squeals that only dogs could detect.

I was informed "When the bird goes into flight; found myself entertained by what took place at the bridge in Eastport. When the unprofessionals pulled over to the side of the road to see what all the hoopla was about, they'd run up to the professionals in a huff and a puff and squeal, "Oh, my God, WIT, do you see? Is it? Is it a plane? A UFO?"

"No," the bird enthusiast would answer cordially.

"It's a Godwit. A black-tailed godwit, to be exact, never before seen in this state and rarely seen along the Atlantic Coast."

The amateur would clomp clomp clomp, back down the road, past the duck crossing signs, shouting and waving to the rest of the family. "Get back in the car," he would say, "It's just a bird." And as some of them drove by slowly with their car windows down, they would stare at each other, pros and amateurs alike, as if the other were some sort of, ummm, birdbrain.

This went on for a couple of weeks, and there are still a few people who are hanging out at the bridge in hope of godwit's return.

I went next door to the bird sighting, and spoke with John Mulholland of the Eastport Dairy Deli, who is now thinking about renaming his delicatessen, The Godwit Deli. "Yeah, business has been good lately," he said with a smile.

"So, what's the story, John?" I asked. He answered, "Well, the buzz among the birders is that the bird left our area and is now in Connecticut."

"But," he said, now lowering his voice, leaning on the counter, and looking over his shoulder, "I know where he really is . . . He moved on to Beaver Dam in Westhampton Beach." (Guess he wanted to be with all the other celebs, like Susan Lucci and Marvin Hamlisch.)

"What were the birdwatchers like?" I asked.

John said, "I guess there's money in birdwatching because these people were well-dressed, drove nice cars and had expensive equipment; they were really nice people. But," he added, "they are quite serious about their birds. When I jokingly told them the 'special of the day' on my menu was Smoked Godwit, they'd raise their eyebrows."

Apparently, the town folk have a sense of humor about it. Just then a patron chimed in, "Did you hear that someone put a pink flamingo in the marsh, where the godwit feeds and the next morning the birders saw the godwit standing next to it eating worms?" (Wish I were a fly on the marsh for that one.)

"And," he went on, "there was an anonymous guy dressed in a chicken suit was running along the railroad tracks, jumping up and down."

"What else have you learned from this?" I asked. Mr. Mulholland said that the birders contribute by helping the public learn more about bird life, their evolution, and migration. And he was told that most rare bird sightings in New York have been between Eastport and Cupsogue. "There's something significant about that area with birds," he said. And I heard one birder saying to another, "Is this your life bird?"

As I left the deli, headed out for my one-on-one interview with the bird, I made a quick U-turn, feeling a little like Colombo. "Oh, John, by the way," I added. "Great coffee." (He nodded, knowingly.)

So, originally, when Dan Rattiner (the rare and extraordinary publisher of this paper) asked me to do a story on a celebrity known as Godwit, I asked for his description.

"Sunglasses, fedora, smoking a cigar?" (How did I know it was a bird.)

It turns out, this European "Who's Here" has a burnt-orange head and neck, and a bright yellow long straight bill and tan feathers, but is not highbrow and will comply to a Q and A."

Memories of last summer came back to haunt me of my rundown with the Piping Plovers, better known as the Bonnie and Clyde of the endangered species list. I mean those birds were nasty. I remember heading over the dunes at Pikes Beach in West Hampton Dunes, and these fine-feathered friends would swoop down and attack me.

Lately, I've been one with nature, always running into animals that 'have a story.' Being an animal lover, I don't really mind, as long as they don't need a stand-in for the next Hitchcock-like sequel. Oooh, the risks of being a reporter!

Guilty?

William Labrador Is Convicted Of Murder In Tortola; Receives Life Sentence

By Jerry Cimisi

In a verdict that took not only the supporters of the accused but many observers by surprise, William Labrador has been found guilty in Tortola of the murder of Lois McMillen on that island in January, 2000.

Labrador, who had been in prison without bail for sixteen months since his arrest in January, 2000, received the verdict in silence at 8:15 on the evening of Thursday, May 10. The jury of nine, seven women and two men, had been deliberating since about one that afternoon. Labrador's mother, Barbara Labrador, also of Southampton, who has been in Tortola throughout the trial, let out a piercing shriek not at the verdict but when the presiding judge Kenneth Benjamin imposed a sentence of life on Labrador. (Unlike American law, there is not a separate sentencing phase after a guilty verdict has been reached.)

"Never, in all the hundreds of trials I have been involved in, have I seen someone convicted of murder with absolutely no physical evidence, no circumstantial evidence, solely on the testimony of a jailhouse snitch," said attorney Michael

Griffith, who has a practice in Southampton and who had put together the legal team that had defended the four Americans who had been arrested in Tortola sixteen months ago.

Three down, and one to go had been the prevailing attitude among the family, friends and the defense attorneys of the four Americans who had gone to claimed that Labrador had confessed the murder to him when both had shared a cell last spring in Her Majesty's Prison on Tortola.

Justice Benjamin had ruled that the jury had to decide if they believed Plante or Labrador. The jury believed Plante.

About two hours before the verdict, the jury told the judge they were divided 7-2, and unable to reach a verdict. It is not known which side favored conviction, though it might be supposed from the verdict that the lesser number were of those who were eventually swayed to convict Labrador.

The jury asked to once more hear the testimony of Jeffrey Plante, the only evidence against Labrador. Justice Benjamin read the transcript of the testimony to the jury, which detailed what Labrador allegedly told Plante in prison: that he, Labrador, had had an argument with McMillen over money, and that he had drowned her by holding her underwater with his foot. In court Labrador testified that he had not seen McMillen the last day of her life. The jury returned in less than trial on April 2. On May 3, Judge Kenneth Benjamin had ordered that three of the defendants – Michael Spicer, Alexander Benedetto and Evan George – had to be released for lack of evidence. William Labrador remained. The one piece of evidence against him was the testimony of Jeffrey Plante, a longtime conman, who had violated parole in Texas and had twice been jailed in Tortola for passing bad checks. Plante two hours with the guilty verdict.

In a phone interview the weekend following the verdict, Griffith said, "An appeal is being readied as we speak."

Simon's, Wuirhead, Burton, a law firm in England, will likely handle the Labrador appeal, which will be heard not in Tortola, but in St. Lucia, another of the Virgin Islands.

An appeals court cannot reverse a jury's decision based on the same evidence that was presented to the jury. An appeal can only be won if a panel of appeals judges finds that there was an illegal irregularity in the trial; or if evidence that should have been presented was withheld.

In a phone interview with Bermuda attorney Richard Hector, who represented William Labrador, Mr. Hector said, "My client is a casualty of a perceived war between Tortola and the American press. These four chaps had been arrested for no reason at all, there had been no evidence. Not even a scintilla of evidence. Until May 11, 2000, when Plante gave his story to the police there was nothing."

Hector went on to relate Plante's longtime criminal record and his continued history of fraud, specifically passing bad checks. "I don't see how they could put this man up there [on the stand] as a witness to truth." When Plante had been freed from prison last year after his testimony about Labrador, he had simply returned to his old ways, passed thirty-two bad checks, and was back in prison by the end of the year.

Hector stressed that the prosecuting attorney, Senior Counsel Theodore Guerra, had tried to inflame the jury by alleging that the Labrador defense team had instigated the American press to badmouth Tortola and the British Virgin Islands.

Hector noted that Labrador had tried to bring attention to the arrest of himself and his companions, but this had not been specifically directed against Tortola. Hector did say that some articles tried to portray Tortola unfavorably. "There was one called 'Island of Fear,' not in good taste," but added this had not been the intent of Labrador, his family or the defense team.

"At one point Theodore Guerra was referring to the Labrador family as liars. The judge had to stop him."

Hector felt that a major point on appeal would be the judge's decision to continue to try Labrador after a submission had been made to dismiss the charges for lack of evidence. Following the end of the prosecution's case, the attorneys for all four defendants moved that the charges should be dismissed for lack of evidence. The judge agreed with three of these proposals, and Alexander Benedetto, Evan George, and Michael Spicer were released. But the judge left it for the jury to decide between Labrador and Plante.

Here Comes South of the Highway

By Dan Rattiner

What do designer Betsy Johnson, actor Alec Baldwin, hip-hop impresario Puffy Combs, TV personality Katlean de Monchy, Shinnecock Hills Golf Club President Elliot Vose and billionaire Fairfield Sampson, London Jewelers Mark Udell and Jennifer Grant, the daughter of Cary Grant and Diane Cannon, all have in common? They are all, verily or inadvertently, a part of the first edition of the new magazine from Dan's Papers entitled South of the Highway.

South of the Highway is stunningly beautiful, oversize, full color and filled with everything you might want to know about living South of the Highway. During 2001, it will appear weekly between Memorial Day and Labor Day. Featured are the most expensive house ever offered for sale south of the highway ($50 million), a unique column from Betsey Johnson, who conducts offbeat interviews with her designer friends, an introduction to a

"secret place" in the Hamptons, what's hot in fashion from Katlean de Monchy, even a wild sitcom about the mythical billionaire Sampson family, Fairfield, Alison, Jennifer and Willie. (Or is it mythical?)

newspaper Dan's Papers, which you are now reading. Dan's Papers is considered by many to be the bible of the Hamptons and the East End. South of the Highway, which will share its 71,000 circulation, which therefore from its outset be the largest glossy magazine ever circulated on the East End, with its focus on the Hamptons, (particularly the South of the Highway part of the Hamptons,) the rest of the East End and Manhattan.

The launch party for the first issue of South of the Highway will take place from 7 to 9 p.m. on Saturday May 26, at London Jeweler's at 1 Main Street in East Hampton. There will be a runway fashion show by Betsey

Hector said that Plante's testimony had conflicted with the evidence. "He said my client had had a fight with Lois McMillen, dragged her across a rocky beach, then held her under the water until she drowned by putting his foot on her neck. There was no evidence of such a fight, there were no bruises from being dragged across a beach, there was nothing on her neck. My client has committed no offense."

Hector also discussed the arrest of Plante's ex-wife, Channon Lytton. She had come to Tortola to be a possible witness for the defense. She did not, however, take the stand. When she was about to leave Tortola she was arrested by the police on the charge that she had passed a bad check for $300.

Hector pointed out that Lytton had had a joint checking account with Plante and it was more likely that it had been Plante's fault that the check was bad. "She has offered to pay the bill." At any rate, Hector added that in a case like this a person might be brought to court pay the bill and pay a fine, but in this case Lytton had actually been indicted, as in a criminal case.

An appeal has to be filed within fourteen days of the verdict. Hector said the appeals court for the British Virgin Islands sits in June and he speculated that even with the appeal filed there might not be time to put together a case for the summer session. The next session would sit in January.

Attorney Michael Griffith related some of the atmosphere the defense team was confronted with, "One of the guards was extremely hostile to the defense. He stopped and searched us, but he did not stop the McMillens. Once I forgot I had a camera with me, a disposable camera. When the guard found it I told him I had simply forgotten. He called me dishonest. We wrote a letter to the judge and the governor."

Griffith addressed one of the points the prosecution had pressed about Labrador's behavior when the police had informed him and the others about McMillen's death. At that point the police had not said anything about her being murdered. Alex Benedetto, who had once dated McMillen in 1997, was going to call McMillen's parents, but Labrador told him he should not get involved in a "criminal investigation." The prosecution contended the only way he could have known the matter was "criminal" was if Labrador had known, because of his involvement, that there had been a murder.

Griffith said, "If policemen show up at your house isn't it natural to use that term, criminal investigation, whether it's technically correct or not? A person who isn't a lawyer isn't going to be making fine distinctions."

In interviews with the press, Russell McMillen, the father of Lois McMillen, expressed the exhaustion he and his wife felt and said that justice had been done. While Barbara Labrador, the mother of the convicted defendant, said there was nothing to do but go with the appeal. She remains staunchly convinced of her son's innocence.

OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER #155 TECH SUPPORT

June is coming up fast. Weddings are going to start any time. Everyone has to scramble for a gift that looks expensive but didn't cost much. Many people simply use the gift recycle method of giving a gift that they got, didn't need or want, left wrapped and ready for the next occasion. This is clever, just be sure to remember who gave you the gift in the first place so you don't blow it and give the gift back to the person who gave it to you. I saw that happen at a bridal shower once. Needless to say, the giver experienced one of the most embarrassing moments in her life.

One thing brides-to-be don't get and desperately need is instructions on new husbands. Zsa Zsa Gabor, an experienced bride, said it best, "All boyfriends are different, all husbands are the same."

New wives need help. They need a tech support line. My buddy Patty McGayhey sent me some tech support ideas a few months ago, Husband 1.0 I have of course, revised and updated the manual a little. I ran a test with several new wives on my new webpage, www.pw.com. I think I have most of the bugs worked out.

Dear Tech Support, I live on Shelter Island. Last June I upgraded from Boyfriend 5.0 to Husband 1.0 and noticed that the new program began making unexpected changes to the money programs, limiting access to flower and jewelry applications that had operated flawlessly under Boyfriend 5.0. In addition, Husband 1.0 uninstalled many other valuable programs, such as Romance 9.9, Dishes to the Kitchen 3.7, and Take Me to Tanger Because I Want Something 3.7. Instead, Husband 1.0 installed undesirable programs such as NFL 5.0 and NBA 3.0. Conversation 8.0 no longer runs at all and HouseCleaning 2.6 simply crashes the system completely. I've tried running Nagging 5.3 to fix these problems, but to no avail. Signed: Desperate New Wife

Dear Desperate Wife, Keep in mind, Boyfriend 5.0 is an entertainment package, while Husband 1.0 is an operating system. None of the HouseCleaning applications will ever work with any Husband programs. For the rest, try to enter the command: C:\ THOUGHT YOU LOVED ME' and install Tears 6.2. Husband 1.0 should then automatically run the applications: Guilty 3.0 and Flowers 7.0. But remember, overuse can cause Husband 1.0 to default to GrumpySilence 2.5, HappyHour 7.0 or Beer 6.1. Beer 6.1 is a very bad program that will create "Snoring Loudly" wave files. DO NOT install MotherInLaw 1.0 or reinstall another Boyfriend program. These are not supported applications and will crash Husband 1.0. In summary, Husband 1.0 is a great program, but it does have limited memory and cannot learn new applications quickly. Consider buying additional software to improve performance. I personally recommend HotLasagna 3.0, Lingerie 5.3 and PlayboyChannel 6.9. Good Luck, Tech Support

Dear Tech Support, I recently upgraded from Husband 1.0 to Husband 3.1. It runs better than Husband 1.0 because I see it deletes the FrequentSex 4.0 from the files and replaces it with OnceAWeek 2.3. Is there a way to delete or block the IWannaBoat portion of the program? The Dump Your Own

Ashtray-or I Will Kill You In Your Sleep 2.0 is working very well. The I Will Take the Recycle Out programs works great too. How can I delete the Attack Her From Behind While She's Doing Dishes 4.7? Signed: Busy New Wife

Dear Busy New Wife, Attack Her From Behind While She's Doing Dishes 4.7 is a bug we can't seem to solve in Husband 3.1, but resolves nicely in Husband 6.0. You may wish to upgrade to Husband 6.0 at this time. It includes the new application Baby 1.0 which automatically wipes out Attack Her From Behind While She's Doing Dishes 4.7 and IWannaBoat at the same time. Husband 6.0 upgrades the OnceAWeek file to InYourDreams 2.4 which initiates the really great Occasional Flowers program. The Quick While the Baby's Asleep program is included and runs only with a password that you will determine. We have additional Baby programs when you want them, but they are very expensive. Husband 6.0 is the one with the Mortgage 1.0.1 program. We strongly recommend that you run Mortgage 1.0.1 to all our customers, it is the precursor for the I Walk the Line 8.2. Don't forget to run Church 1.7 once a week to resolve all init conflicts in the program.

Good Luck, Tech Support

Dan's Diary: September 11, 1981

Nobody would dare to fly a seaplane into Three Mile Harbor today. But back in the 1970s and early 80s they did, and the water police could not catch them... until this episode in 1981. —dr

POLICE BOAT VS. SEA PLANE

An ocean view. A harbor view. A sunset view. If you've lived out here for a long time, and you're not among the very rich, it really begins to get to you after awhile. What's so special about a water view?

Several years ago, unable to resist temptation any longer, I rented a modern, oceanfront house with sliding glass. I could not afford to rent this place during the height of the summer season, but I figured, what the hell, a view is a view. My rental season, for $250. per month plus utilities, was September 15 to May 15. Perhaps I'd get this ocean view business out of my system.

To tell you the truth, I did not find that it was any great shakes having an oceanfront house. The house was set directly behind the first oceanfront dune — a sacred object — and even though the house was set high up on stilts, one could never get a real clear view of the breaking surf. The ocean itself was in view at all times, and it certainly was a restful experience looking at it out of all the sliding glass, but there just was not much variety. An ocean was an ocean. Occasionally a big ship would go by on the horizon, and through the telescope I'd be able to identify it as a giant oil tanker or a freighter, but that was it. Big deal.

What I really wanted, I decided when that rental had ended, was a view of a busy harbor. I looked around for a house on a harbor and discovered they were all prohibitively expensive. They all were waterfront. Some had private docks. But then I came across a tiny house across the street from a harbor. It was on a hillside, looking down at not only the activity of Three Mile Harbor in East Hampton, but at a beautiful sunset over the shoreline across the way. The real estate broker who showed me this house back in 1978 apologized for its proximity to the busy Three Mile Harbor Road between the front lawn and the boats, and for the tiny size of the house — it was just five little rooms — but then it was not badly priced. It was just $41,000 with a 6% mortgage. I bought it the minute I saw it.

I built a fence to block most of the road, added a couple of bedrooms, a deck and an awning, and since the spring of 1977 have sat, happy-as-a-clam — if you'll pardon the pun, watching the life of the harbor unfold below. I can't see how I could ever tire of this.

There is, for example, the rental service of Brucie's Boats across the way. It is one of my greater joys watching complete novices trying to handle the little catboats in the heavy wind. They rent windsurfers here, and this summer jet powered surfboards. Somewhere from over in the direction of Brucie's Boats there is a long distance swimmer who conducts his exercises in front of our house. Never mind that Three Mile Harbor is filled with jellyfish, horseshoe crabs, eels and other awful things. He swims slowly across the harbor, back and forth, back and forth, about six times all together every day. To the left of us is Bob Story's

Three Mile Harbor Boat Yard. One of the features here is an out of doors public address system. For most of the year about twice a day, one hears BOB. PLEASE COME TO THE PHONE, just like they might page somebody at a department store or a busy airport. By day we enjoy the whines of outboards or the rumbles of big oceangoing ChrisCrafts. We can clearly hear the shouts of yachtsmen as they haul their sails up on big yawls or three-masted schooners as they come in at sunset. (It reminds me of a Miller Beer commercial). By night we can see the glow of the lanterns in the cabins and we can hear the rattle of the lines banging against the aluminum masts. Ducks and swans float about in this harbor, peacefully at home among the many boats, and in the wetlands along the shores, men in shiny black rubber boots scratch the harbor bottom with wooden clamping rakes.

Occasionally, we get to watch the Sixteenth Lord of the Manor, Robert David Lion Gardiner, standing tall in a bright blue blazer at the wheel of his elegant black yacht Shadow, leaving his personally owned marina, taking guests out to his private island two miles off shore. Flags are flying, pennants waving. It is a royal event. Gardiner's Island has been in his family since the time of King James.

And then there are the sunsets. They are beautiful things, as varied as the days of the year. Often, a shiny black Porsche or BMW will pull up and park in front of our house, and a handsome, well dressed couple with all sorts of photographic equipment will get out.

"We get this every day!" I shouted at one of these couples. They turned around and I ducked behind a picnic table.

Without a doubt, however, the most interesting scene that goes on in our little part of the harbor is that of the policeboat. A tall, fully uniformed East Hampton policeman is in charge of this policeboat, which is docked directly in front of our house, but about twenty-five slips down. He's here all the time, which is a rather comforting thing. But the reason he is here all the time, I think, is that he enjoys the goings on in the Harbor just about as much as we do. Occasionally, he'll leap in his boat, turn the overhead flashing blue light on, and roar off toward the jetties in pursuit of some trouble. At other times, he just sits in the cabin of the boat listening to whatever comes in over the police radio. One night, about eleven o'clock, in fact, he came down here with a friend and just sat in the cabin with the radio on. They stayed about two hours and I imagined them sitting there, listening, having a few beers, enjoying the sounds of the evening. The crazy summerpeople were probably a better entertainment than Laverne and Shirley.

Often, we have watched the policeboat run down a few offenders. People are supposed to wear life preservers. They are not supposed to leave a wake. There's a speed limit of five miles an hour in the harbor. The flashing blue light will go on, the boat will roar off at a ridiculous "breakneck" speed of about nine knots, and then hail the offender over a loudspeaker. The yachtsmen, totally intimidated, invariably correct whatever thing they are doing wrong.

And then there was the seaplane. For three weeks in a row, exactly at 4 p.m. on a Friday, like clockwork, a small single engine seaplane would glide in and settle down in the wide part of the harbor one mile away. The seaplane would then motor in to within two hundred feet of our house, stop, and disembark a New York businessman. He'd stand on the sponson of this seaplane in a three piece suit, patiently holding a black leather attache case, and finally board a small dinghy that would motor out from a large yacht tied up nearby. The pilot of the seaplane would turn around, roar back out to the harbor, gun the engine and then zoom off to the west. It was an outrageous break of the five mile an hour rule in the harbor, and for the first three weeks, the policeboat didn't even see him. The whole affair had taken just six or seven minutes. The policeboat was up chasing yachtsmen out by the jetty.

On the fourth Friday, however, we saw the policeboat laying for the seaplane. It was over behind the docks of Three Mile Harbor Marina beyond Brucie's Boats, and at exactly 4 o'clock, as the seaplane landed, the policeboat zoomed out to make the arrest. The boat had timed it perfectly. The seaplane had come roaring up the harbor toward our house and as it did so, the policeboat simply pulled in behind him, lights flashing, blocking his retreat.

The scene which took place after this would have done justice to a Woody Allen movie. I called the entire family to come out on the deck for the duration.

The first thing was that the policeboat made a couple of circles around the seaplane to give it a feeling of being surrounded. The seaplane, with both the pilot and the businessman seated silently inside, rocked back and forth on its sponsons. Then the small dinghy made its appearance from the anchored yacht. It came out aways, then stopped dead in the water. What do I do? For an answer, the businessman opened the seaplane door and climbed down just as he always did. The dinghy chugged over, the businessman climbed in, and then the dinghy took him away. End of businessman.

The policeman, meanwhile, was having a considerable number of words with the seaplane pilot. After an exchange of documents, the seaplane turned and, maintaining with considerable difficulty a speed of just three or four miles an hour, headed back up toward the jetty three miles away.

Keep in mind that this plane had never been in the water outside the jetty. He had always landed right in the calm waters of the harbor. Now, however, he would obey the speed limit all the way out to Gardiner's Bay for the very good reason that the policeboat, with the blue light flashing was heaping humiliation on top of everything by following about twenty-five yards behind. At three knots, I figured, it would take him the better part of an hour to get all the way to the jetty, much less through it. This would be more time than it would take to fly back to New York.

I asked the policeman about all this the very next day when I saw him down at the policeboat.

"Did you escort him through the jetty?"

"All the way to the three mile limit."

"What did you give him a ticket for?"

"Speedin'."

Yesterday afternoon a tall man in a brightly colored jogging suit came discoing down Three Mile Harbor Road on big wooden roller skates. He had a Sony Walkman plugged into his ears and a tape going, and he was oblivious to everything. Today, a big sloop pulled into our end of the harbor and turned once around so I could enjoy the name on its stern. More Madness, it said.

In the fall, at the Three Mile Harbor Boat Yard across the way, all the big boats will be hauled out of the water and placed on trailers on land for the winter drydock. I've often thought of setting up a movie camera on the deck to take one frame a day of this operation. You could play it back at regular speed and watch the ships climb onto the land like lemmings.

Then it will be winter. The clammers will walk out on the ice carrying buckets and hatchets, and they will chop holes in the ice in search of eels. These they will pull out, shaking and wriggling, at the end of long, sharp eel spears. •

James (Continued from page 23)

Bridgehampton farmer shot a 66 year old friend for going after his 62 year old girl friend. People talked about it for years. There wasn't much else to talk about.

Well, times have changed and as Willie Sutton once said, he robs banks because that's where the money is. Well, now where the money is is the east end. And the bank robbers have followed, also the burglars and con artists, the loose women and embezzlers. And so the stores and houses are alarmed and locked up tight with security guards and professional house watchers. There's all this expensive stuff inside. And so many creative, but sometimes very dumb people trying to get at it.

One dumb thing, for instance, is that Carmine Galante (the younger) tried to disguise himself by eating. It worked. When he arrived on the east end, he was 5' 7" tall and weighed 190 pounds. One year later, he was still 5' 7" tall but now weighed 300 pounds. Nobody knew who he was anymore. Certainly I didn't know who he was anymore. He could walk or waddle around anywhere, and often did, and nobody would recognize him.

I know this doesn't have anything to do with this story but have you noticed how fat Al Gore has gotten? When he was out here running for the Democratic nomination I had lunch with him at the American Hotel one day and I was so impressed.

He was broad shouldered and narrow in the waist and looked like the strong man in the circus. Later on, I even voted for him. Now he's gone and gotten himself all bloated up. I wrote about this last week in this paper and speculated that maybe Al Gore after his bitter loss just was all stressed out and was eating his way into being somebody else. Recent photos show him with a double chin and a paunch and you wouldn't even know it was him anymore.

Hey, it worked for Carmine Galante the Younger. (The cops only arrested him after they got a tip.) So if he packs in enough big macs, it will probably work for Al Gore. This could be a new cookbook. The Celebrity's Guide to Regaining Anonymity. •

THE BELLS ARE RINGING FOR THE PRINCESS GRACE FOUNDATION

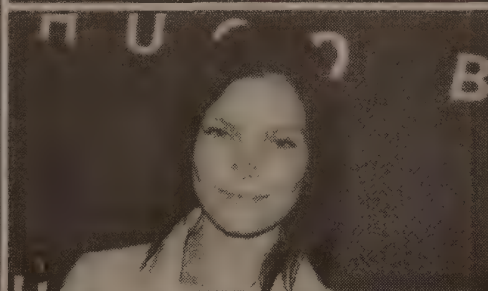

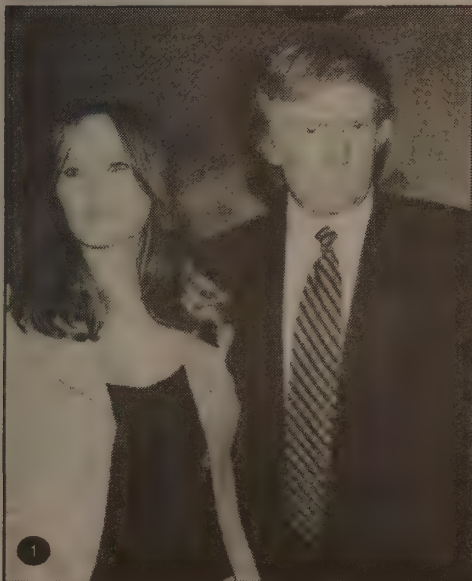

It is a special moment for those who support the Princess Grace Foundation to see one of their awardees involved in a major Broadway show. But when three past winners are in the same show it's a rare triple play. HSH Crown Prince Albert of Monaco was on hand to toast Tina Landau, director, Riccardo Hernandez, set designer, and Jeffrey Bean, actor at a reception at Baldoria, underwritten by David and Simone Martel Levinson. Then the crowd went on to the Plymouth Theater to see the performance of Bells Are Ringing. Faith Prince starred in Bells a tough act to follow, because the multi-talented Judy Holliday starred in the original production in the 1950s. Faith pulls it off remarkably well with a little Judy and some Lucy mixed into her character. The show's book and lyrics were written by Hamptons' stalwarts Betty Comden and Adolph Green. This party or any party hosted by Prince Albert brings out more beauties than a Miss Universe contest, each looking to wear the crown.

WHO'S THE BOSS? HUGO OF COURSE

Fifth Avenue got a little brighter with the opening of the Hugo Boss Flagship Store last week. The party was from 9 pm to midnight, late by my standards, but had no problem attracting many of the New York trendies. It featured a performance by the Dan Band and hot DJ Samantha Ronson. Meg Ryan was camera shy. She showed but didn't show her face to photographers.

It is theater award season and there are parties as well as award ceremonies around town. The Drama Desk committee gave a party last week to introduce the nominees to the media and patrons of the arts. In addition, the new Drama Desk award created by Lalique was unveiled. Doing a preview of the shtick we'll see at the Drama Desk Award ceremony on May 20 was the one and only Lili Tomlin. The awards will be televised on NY1 News live and then on WNET on May 25.

ROCKY HORROR SHOW RECORDS CAST ALBUM

The Rocky Horror Show live on Broadway celebrated the release of their cast album at the Time Lounge in New York. The amazing album features the cast of the hit revival and such memorable songs as "Time Warp" and "Sweet Transvestite." Tom Hewitt, a Tony and Drama Desk Nominee for Best Actor in a musical, was on hand along with the rest of the outstanding cast. The show, now playing at the Circle in the Square Theater, is also nominated for a Tony and Drama Desk Award as Best Revival of a Musical. The album will be released on Tuesday, May 15th, but I've heard it already and I can assure you Rocky definitely rocks.

Kimberly Goff

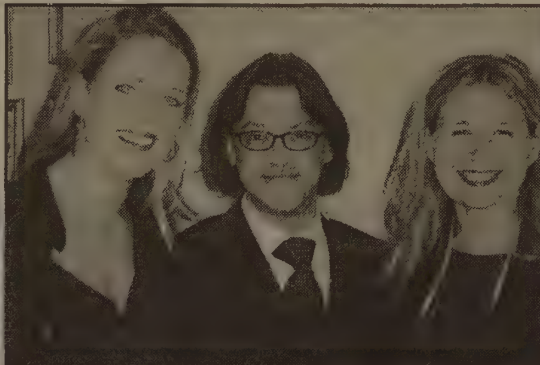

The Elaine Benson Gallery and Sculpture Garden hosted the Meet The Writers Book Fair to benefit the John Steinbeck Writing Project and library at Long Island University's Southampton College on Friday, May 11th. This was the twenty-fourth annual Meet the Writers Book Fair. The Book Fair is always the first event of the gallery's summer schedule and marks the opening of the season. This year's Steinbeck Award for excellence in writing went to the poet Kenneth Koch. Among the more than eighty authors signing books was our own Dan Rattiner. It was warm and beautiful (for the first time in more than six years)

Who's Here:

By Susan Simm

"After 25 years, I decided that I'd had enough of the corporate world and wanted to spend more time here on the East End of Long Island," said Frank Lynn recently. "About the same time that I'd made this decision, I was at a dinner party and was saying how much I'd like to volunteer and get involved with the East End Seaport Museum. I feel that it has such potential here in this maritime village of Greenport."

Frank's wish came true, in the form of an executive directorship, which he was offered and subsequently happily assumed on May 1 of this year.

Mr. Lynn, a native Texan, came to Greenport by way of Washington D.C., Brussels, Chicago and New York. Talk about taking the long way! After pursuing a successful career in the software industry, he brings well-traveled life experience and enthusiasm to his new position.

The East End Seaport Museum and Marine Foundation, which was formed in 1990, maintains and operates a museum, Bug Light lighthouse, out in Gardiner's Bay, and the old blacksmith shop in Greenport. Bug Light, which was built during the 1870s and burned by vandals during the 1960s, has since been restored. A lens from the lighthouse is part of a current exhibit at the museum.

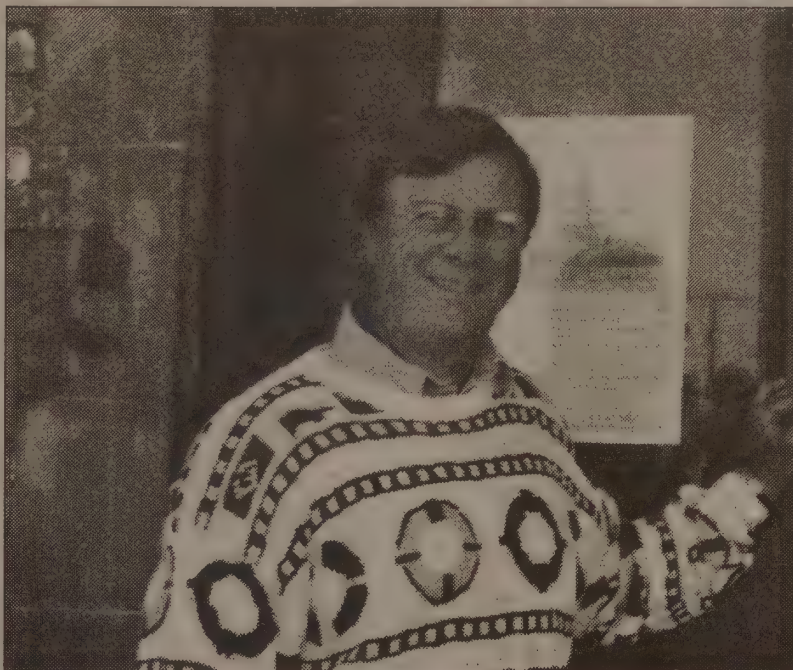

The seaport museum is housed in the old Greenport train station building, a charming and familiar structure next to the North Ferry terminal. This seems strange until you discover the connection.

"This building is linked to the waterway because, back in the late 1880s, the railroad lines were not complete from New York through Connecticut to Boston," explained Frank. "People would take the train out to Greenport and then travel by steamer on to Connecticut. So the railroad was very much a part of the maritime. In addition, the trains were used to ship seafood back to New York from this fishing port and would also transport workers to the steamers, and before that to the sailing ships, who would take the trains out from New York City and its outer boroughs."

A striking and sophisticated couple, Frank and his wife Jane Baxter Lynn, Executive Director of the Long Island Wine Council, met on an international stage. Frank had just moved to Brussels, Belgium to act as vice president for Europe, the Middle East and Africa for his software company and met his future wife on what turned out to be an informal blind date. Jane, who was born in Zimbabwe and lived in South Africa and Paris before landing in Belgium, was also there on business.

"I was working late one evening and a woman I was working with was meeting a friend for dinner, so she invited me along. Her friend was Jane. The rest is history!"

After they were married, they moved to the States, living first in Chicago for Frank's career and then New York, for Jane's. While they were living in New York, they would come out to Southold to spend weekends with friends and finally bought a summer home themselves. Then, four years ago, they gave up city life and moved out east full time. Too young to retire but tired of moving around, they wanted to live someplace where they could pursue interests in local activities and utilize their impressive internationally-honed skills in new ways.

Frank Lynn Museum Director

"Both of our current positions [Jane has been executive director since September of last year at the Wine Council] now give us opportunities to contribute to our community," said Frank.

So what's in store at the museum? Plenty, with much more planned.

Currently on exhibit, in addition to the Bug Light lens, is a lens from Little Gull Light. The latter is a huge affair, shooting up to the roof. It was originally powered by oil and then later by gas. "Lighthouse keepers were very important in the old days," said Frank. He has plans to invite Jim Crawley, a noted author whom he recently heard lecture on lighthouses, to participate in the Maritime Festival this fall. "He has some fascinating tales!"

Also on exhibit are photos and rare items from the famed J Boats, the America's Cup contenders, of the 1930s. The masts were over 160 feet tall and they carried enough sail, in the spinnaker alone, to cover the infield of a baseball diamond. Frank tells a story about seeing these in action in first hand.

"I was out sailing my 30-foot boat and saw them in the distance, surrounded by many small craft. As I approached, I realized that the 'small craft' were actually sailboats the size of mine. It was really spectacular!"

Frank's greatest hope is to draw more members of the community in, particularly the merchants. "It takes money as well as volunteers to operate museums and lighthouses. It is very important to our long-term success that we get their support."

Many exciting events are on the calendar this year. The Lighthouse Cruise, the biggest fundraising event of the season, is coming up on May 26. A 125-foot cruise ship is chartered, a gourmet lunch will be served and up to 12 different sights, weather permitting, will be visited. Also in the works are a visit from the tall ship, Eagle, Black History Week and the Maritime Festival this fall. Watch our North Fork Day-by-Day calendar for dates.

When asked what his greatest challenge has been so far, Frank answers without hesitation.

"There is just not enough time. If I could fit 36 hours into a day, it would be great!"

Lieb Family Cellars will celebrate a grand opening of its tasting room at the Premium Wine Group crush facility owned by partners Mark Lieb, winemaker Russell Hearn and Bernie Sussman on Sound Avenue (Rt. 48) in Mattituck this Saturday and Sunday from 11 a.m.-5 p.m. This is truly a family operation. Mark's wife, Kathy Lieb, handles retail sales and marketing and her brother, Ray Hines, runs the vineyard. Lieb makes only estate reserve wines and its current roster includes a pinot blanc, a chardonnay, a merlot and a sparkler made from pinot blanc. Come and join the festivities this weekend. Salut!

Channing Daughters Winery of Bridgehampton is pleased to announce four new releases: a '99 Sculpture Garden Chardonnay, '00 Novello d'Hamptons, '99 Sculpture Garden Merlot. Channing's emphasis is on "fresh" wines aged primarily in stainless steel. Its newest "fresh red," the '00 Fresh Red Merlot, has been aged using very little oak and the perfumey fruit of the wine shines through brightly. The '00 Novello d'Hamptons, a new addition to Channing's stable of wines, is made from 100% merlot grapes and is loaded with cherry and berry aromas. It will go quickly and takes a slight chill well. But only 100 cases have been made, so don't miss out!

More praise for Laurel Lake Vineyards. Coming right on the heels of applause for its '00 Lake Rose by Howard G. Goldberg of the New York Times, it received a gold medal for its '96 Cabernet Sauvignon Estate Bottled Reserve at the Florida State Fair International Wine and Grape Juice Competition. Bravo! We look forward to more fabulous releases.

Whitney Art Works: One Year Old

By Susan Simm

"People really love the idea of becoming a part of something," said Deborah Whitney, who has become a part of the Greenport art scene this past year. "I love feeling the community of people who had been strangers just the day before."

Inspired by life experience and a desire to become more involved in the arts community here on the East End, Deb opened Whitney Art Works in May of last year. The response has been very positive, particularly among other gallery owners.

"I never envisioned myself as an art dealer," said Deb, an attractive woman in her 30s with short-cropped hair and a serene demeanor. "I'm actually running this space more like a non-profit organization. It's a really wonderful space and it gives me a chance to show a lot of work (because of its size) and I can, basically, do anything I want. The rent is reasonable, and because I don't have a big overhead, I can really play with it."

When the space occupied by the gallery became available last year, it was full of fishing nets and had no walls or even stairs.

"My husband has an interest in architectural history and when it came time to put in the stairs, he advised me to build a stairwell with walls that come up to waist level when you reach the top. He said that this will create a greater sense of openness." The effect is like that of time-lapse photography, where you see a bud slowly open into a full blossom. When you reach the top of the stairs, you have the feeling of being in the center of an open flower, surrounded by vast open space.

In the style of New York museums, Deb hangs a red banner out of a window, which is beautifully flanked rents space for his art-moving and storage company (a fledgling business less than 2 years old). Adjacent to them is a glassworks and across the parking lot is the Salamander Café, a fabulous little gourmet food store.

Deb is a painter herself and has worked at galleries and non-profit organizations for the past 18 years, both in Boston and in London. She and her husband moved out to Greenport four years ago and have since had their daughter, Nell, who will turn four in September.

"I started working at the East End Arts Council in Riverhead four years ago and still work there part time as a curator. But after three years of driving back and forth from Riverhead everyday, I felt like I didn't live anywhere. During the past year, I've met people that I had wanted to get to know and I really feel like I live here now. It's been a great way to carve a life out for myself here."

On this particular morning, Nell joins Deb at the gallery, equipped with a small case filled with toys. The advantages for both mom and daughter are very much in evidence.

Shelter Island artist Alan Shields, the 'necklace man' of the North Ferry, will be exhibiting at Whitney in August. Deb is very excited about this show. "Alan has shown internationally and is currently painting on paper and working with pulp. His work has become very three

Come to an Open House June 1st and Meet a Young Oyster

By Mary Foster Morgan

As a youngster, I had the fun of harvesting handfuls of clams, oysters and scallops from the nearby creeks. This program is great! I can learn about aquaculture, tend my own shellfish garden, and be part of the community effort that will bring back the scallop, oyster and clam to Peconic Bay!

—A Southold Resident

One of the reasons the Peconics are so important is that they act as a nesting site, a nursery and a food source for many species of marine life who depend on local species for their food. Bringing back the bay scallop and oyster will not only revive an industry, it is critical to the health of the bays.

—Kim Tetrault, Hatchery Manager
—CCE Marine Program

Did you ever think that bi-valves might make a difference in the water quality of Peconic Bay? Or that a community effort could be started to help bring back the oyster, clam and bay scallop to our waters?

That's just what's going on in Southold. And you're invited to learn more about this project called SPAT, or Southold Project in Aquaculture Training by coming to an Open House, June 1st, 2001, from 5:30-7:30, at the Cornell Marine Center, part of Cornell Cooperative Extension of Suffolk County. The Center is located at the Suffolk County Marine Environmental Learning Center, at the end of Cedar Beach Road, off Main Bayview, in Southold. Fittingly, it is situated at Cedar Beach, a 70-acre county preserve of beach, salt marsh and bay habitats that allow year-round opportunities for education, research and scientific experimentation.

The new community based shellfish restoration is an important effort for the Peconic Estuary. By all accounts, the brown tide of the '80s has destroyed our shellfish stocks. Currently, the estuary supports less than 1% of our historic oyster stocks, and less than that of scallops. It is also a momentous "giant step" in the history of the Cornell Cooperative Extension Marine Program's Shellfish Hatchery. After 10 years of research and development, spawning and growing more than 6 million seed shellfish annually for release into local waters, the public is being invited to take an active role in culturing, planting and monitoring seed clams, oysters and scallops, and play a crucial role in relaying shellfish into our creeks to restore and enhance shellfish beds.

Launched this past January, SPAT has already attracted over 90 participants, and six corporate sponsors including Burt's Reliable, Peconic Bay Winery, Peconic Bay Prime, Soury Communications, Inc., Lav-Cor Agricultural, North Fork Captain's Association, and Nautical, Inc. The new "master shellfish gardeners" have been attending monthly workshops, learning such things as algae culture, broodstock conditioning and spawning, larval and post-set culture of oysters and clams, and this May, about designing and building a land-based upweller. Come June, everyone will receive the gear and "spat" 2,000 juvenile oysters, plus scallops and clams, to grow in their garden.

To accommodate the demand, each session will be repeated three times. The next one, on designing and building a land-based upweller, is being held Tuesday, May 15, 2-4p.m., Thursday, May 17, 6:30-8:30 p.m. and Friday, May 18, 2-4p.m. Another way to sign up is to reserve space at the Special Summer Intensive Workshop sessions which are being arranged for new participants on Saturday, June 16, 9 a.m.-noon and Friday, June 22 9 a.m.-noon. Reservations are required for all workshops.

Cornell has made arrangements with the Town of Southold to give the project participants special garden plots at Cedar Beach Creek. There is room for two hundred test plots here at Cedar Beach, and the program can also work with those who have access to creek sites for their own test plots. As a special "perk" of the project, shellfish gardeners can keep 75% of their harvest, returning the rest to Cornell to become part of the community effort to relay shellfish into our creeks to restore and enhance shellfish beds.

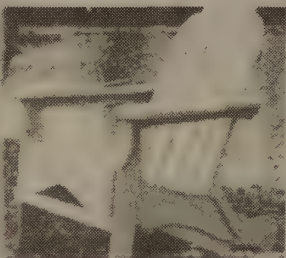

Similar community-based projects for shellfish and water quality restoration are being tested in the Chesapeake Bay, the Gulf of Mexico, Spain, Ireland, The Netherlands and Canada. The project in Southold has the distinction of combining three elements — hands-on training, access to research from our non-profit hatchery, and access to "garden" plots — while also encouraging a community-wide stewardship effort in shellfish restoration and water quality restoration.

This is the only community based shellfish restoration effort of its kind, developed to help protect and restore our extraordinary 110,000 acres Peconic Estuary. So come to the open house and learn all about it.

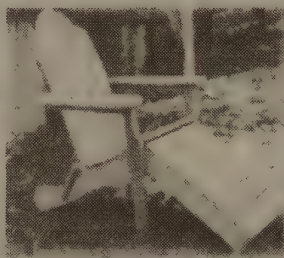

Mary Foster Morgan, supervisor for public affairs at Cornell Cooperative Extension of Suffolk County's Marine Program, is coordinating the SPAT initiative. She can be reached at 631-852-8660

Here's Looking At You, Kid

By Susan Simm

The North Fork seems to attract pioneers. Over twenty years ago, Alex and Louisa Hargrave planted grapevines in Cutchogue. Today, hundreds of acres are under cultivation and the trend shows no sign of abating. In fact, a new kind of pioneer has joined their ranks: a dairy farmer.

Not an ordinary dairy farmer, of course. Anthony Perullo, along with his wife Melissa, opened Captain Kid Dairy less than a year ago, with the goal of making and marketing fresh goat cheese.

"I realized that dairy farming, if you produce a product and don't rely on selling milk, which the government sets prices on, is a real viable outlet for farmland out here," said Anthony. The response has been so positive that he is in the process of building an aging facility so that he can branch out into aged cow's milk cheeses, including blues.

After graduating from Stony Brook with a degree in biochemistry, Anthony went away to medical school but found it wasn't for him. "There was so much memorization involved. It was like memorizing stacks of Sears catalogues!" So after interning upstate with Egg Farm Dairy, cheesemakers, Anthony went to work for Christian Wolffer and Roman Roth at Sagpond Vineyard where they allowed him to take over the cheesemaking process at the farm in Sagaponack.

"They were very gracious," Anthony said. "Unfortunately, I move a little bit too quickly for most people. I can be a 'loose cannon,' as Christian used to say. But I feel that it's this very quality that has allowed me to get as far as I have."

Captain Kid has five or six varieties of milk goats.

Butch the at the helm of the pirate ship

While most are not purebred, there are several La Mancha goats, an earless variety, one of whom is named Oprah, so named for her caring and supportive personality. The one billy goat, Butch, is almost 6 feet tall when he stands on his hind legs, something he likes to do in the Dutch doorway of the barn, so that he can have his chin and forehead stroked. These are affectionate and curious animals, poking their heads into anything interesting.

Well-read in the bylaws of milk control, Anthony takes sanitation very seriously. "The Department of Agriculture has been very supportive. I may actually be a minion of job security for them. They have to send someone all the way from Albany because the local inspectors aren't familiar with dairy farming practices," he commented.

One of the first things that Anthony did was to build the 'pirate ship' in the middle of the goat pen. He jokes, "you can see where my priorities were in the beginning!" But the goats absolutely love it. They take turns running up and down the gangplanks and Butch, in particular, is very fond of manning the helm, often posing for a photo op. Currently producing about 150 pounds each of fresh chevre and feta, Melissa is marketing the products to retailers on the North and South Forks, including vineyards. Anthony wants to keep the operation simple for now, not involving distributors. But the future may bring big changes.

"The core of my operation is cheesemaking and the way the production is set up, I can produce about 1,000 pounds of cheese a week, ultimately. It's just a matter of finding the right people to work with me." This can be especially difficult, as one mistep in sanitation practices could jeopardize a lot of product.

Almost the minute the sign on Sound Avenue in Mattituck went up, people started stopping. "I'm really excited by the response so far, even though it sure can be a miserable amount of work. With so many animals, something goes wrong on a daily basis. I have to be careful to keep my sense of humor or I couldn't do this!" Anthony said.

Despite the workload, the rewards are very much in evidence when you visit this little farm; the owners beam with pride over their accomplishments. Anthony believes that agriculture makes the East End a real treasure and is willing to take risks to show his conviction. He is convinced that, because of the success of the vineyards, many peripheral businesses will flourish as the wines just become better every year. He feels that while it is important to have a solid understanding of what you're involved in, it is more important to love what you do.

"I think the only people that really succeed in this world have to be a little explosive but very passionate about what they're doing. I'm not an expert at this, by any means. In fact, I'm underqualified. It's all heart."

dimensional." He shows at several galleries in the city but is showing at Whitney to show his support of both Deb and her gallery.

Another supporter is Jeffrey Levy, the "granddaddy" of the arts community, whose Yellow House gallery is adjacent to Whitney. Yellow House has been open for several summers and his openings spill out onto the lawn next to the gallery. "Jeffrey held an open house at his gallery last year, before he officially opened for the season, so that people on his mailing list would learn about Whitney and visit. There is also another gallery, Art Sights, which opened just over a year ago. The three of us now schedule our openings on the same day, so people can go from one to the other. The turnouts are great!" said Deb.

The current exhibitor, Nancy Wisseman, is a resident of Southold who also spends time in Maine and Puerto Rico. Her oils are vibrant and large and look wonderful in the space. Having never exhibited before on the East End, her local friends have never had a chance to see her work until this exhibit without traveling to New York. Nancy's opening was sponsored by the Arts in Southold Town and wine was provided by Channing Daughters Winery of Bridgehampton, where a friend of Nancy's works.

Galleries, traditionally the realm of the South Fork, are bursting onto the scene in the bucolic North Fork region. Slowly, as the vineyard industry matures, the relationship between the two forks is becoming more and more circular and less polar. Whitney Art Works is a very welcome addition here in Greenport, an old whaling port in many ways reminiscent of Sag Harbor.

SALAMANDER GENERAL STORE

The renaissance of Greenport is under way. Changes that have occurred over the past several years are starting to take root in a new, more upscale style. Every month there seems to be an exciting gallery or shop opening its doors for business. This is no more evident than on First Street, about two blocks north of Front Street, in the middle of town. Where a fish shop used to be, Claudia Helinski opened the Salamander General Store, a specialty and gourmet shop.

Ms. Helinski is a known quantity around the North Fork. She ran the Salamander Restaurant (at Brewer's Yacht Yard) for seven seasons before changing venues and going for a retail store.

"The store was started three years ago with an idea toward making the food from the restaurant available for take home. The response has been excellent! We wanted to make fresh breads available to everyone on the North Fork, which were not available previously. It was very difficult to find good cheese and superior baked products until fairly recently," she said.

Claudia learned how to cook by doing just that. "I traveled extensively throughout Europe, the Far East, Morocco and North Africa. I learned a lot about the foods of those places, so that when I wanted to cook professionally, I had a notion about what I wanted to do but I didn't have the technique to do it. So I went to work in restaurants as a prep person in order to learn technique. After some torturous years, I did learn it, the hard way, and came up through the ranks. I learned a lot through books and eventually began to learn from other chefs." Claudia worked as a chef in Manhattan before moving out to Greenport with her husband Steven, who builds docks and blows glass part time.

Both the Salamander Restaurant and now the General Store have been well regarded on the local catering scene. "The growth of the wine business has helped our catering business tremendously. We started catering at the vineyards," said Claudia. "We've got some wonderful new customers and many of the local customers are coming back again for their annual parties. We do a lot of weddings and family reunions. We supply tents, tables, chairs, dishes, everything. We are full service caterers."

Meanwhile, inside the General Store, a customer can find a wonderful array of cheeses including terrific, ripe Roquefort (which Claudia was kind enough to let my husband and I sample), fresh bread from Tom Cat bakery in New York, many different and delicious packaged goods and prepared foods.

Claudia offers fried and roasted chicken, salads, even aged Angus beef steaks, grill ready. She is very proud for her soups and if you are lucky, Claudia will divulge the recipe to her famous marinated duck breast (French herbs and lavender) with fabulous port wine sauce. Not a cook? The port wine sauce can be prepared to order and the duck breast is grill-ready. The duck is raised locally at Crescent Duck Farm in Aquebogue. "I special order the breasts skinned and boned. Did you know that duck breast with no skin has 25% less fat than skinless chicken breast?" she asks. I didn't, but I can't wait to try it. Steven describes it as resembling filet mignon when cooked.

Here are two of Claudia's favorite recipes. Her clam chowder is in the classic style, perfect for our local clams, and spring peas, onions and lettuce is a wonderful French-influenced side dish which utilizes some of the

Monterey Clam Chowder

Compliments of Claudia Helinski, Salamander General Store, Greenport
Serves six

3 leeks, washed and sliced
1 Spanish onion, chopped
2 bulbs fennel, julienned, tops reserved
2 carrots, diced large
1 tablespoon minced garlic
1/4 cup extra virgin olive oil
2 teaspoons tumeric
pinch saffron
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon fresh thyme
1 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 teaspoon freshly ground fennel seed
1/4 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1x3" strip of orange zest
1 cup good white wine
2-35 oz. cans San Marzano tomatoes
1 quart fresh chopped clams and juice
Dash of Pernod
Chopped fennel tops and parsley

1. Sweat the vegetables, including garlic, in olive oil for 5 minutes. Stir in tumeric.

2. Add remaining seasonings, orange zest, wine and tomatoes. Simmer 15 minutes or until carrots and fennel are soft.

3. Add clams and clam juice and simmer until clams are cooked through, about 5 minutes.

4. Season with dash Pernod to taste, and top with chopped fennel tops and parsley.

Soup is thick and can be thinned with water or additional clam juice. Serve with a salad and crusty bread.

Spring peas, Onions and Lettuce

A simple side dish perfect for late spring.

Serves four-six

2 pounds fresh garden peas
2-3 bunches tiny spring onion bulbs
2 heads green bibb lettuce
3 tablespoons butter
Salt

1. Clean onions and slice into strips. Set aside. Blanch peas in salted boiling water. Drain and set aside.

2. Wash and dry lettuce and slice into strips. Set aside.

3. Heat butter in a saute pan with 2 tablespoons of water and cook onions 3-4 minutes.

4. Add peas just to warm through and lettuce just to wilt at the last minute.

5. Season with salt and pepper.

How To Build A Golf Course

By Roy Bradbrook

There is a legendary or, possibly, apocryphal recipe for rabbit pie which begins, "First catch your rabbit!" The equivalent for a golf course designer is probably, "First find your land." This is becoming more and more of a challenge, as, all over the country, the demand for golf courses escalates, while the supply of suitable and available land diminishes.

Kelly Blake Moran is a golf course architect who, while still a relatively young man, already has built up an impressive resume. He spent eleven years with von Hagge Design Associates working on projects in Mexico, the Caribbean, South America and the United States. He was a partner in the firm at the time he decided to leave and set up his own company. Today, one of his main projects is the design and construction of the new Laurel Links Country Club's course in Laurel on the North Fork. Recently, I had the opportunity to sit down and talk with Kelly about the way that he approaches such a project.

When asked about how he starts off, he said, "Taking Laurel Links as an example, first of all you look at the maps of the area and absorb the nature of the original land. Here the land had been used for potato farming and there are lots of sand once you remove the topsoil. While the land is essentially flat, there are lots of subtle movements in the topography. I walk the land for several days on end. In my mind, I look for what will make a great golf hole and how the course will flow from one hole to another. Sometimes, I may stand at one point for maybe two hours to really appreciate all of the potential. You have to take account of any major natural features which you either cannot or do not want to change. Then, there are road boundaries and often today, new courses include provisions for houses within the complex. So blending these into the landscape is a further challenge. It is too easy today for designers to use computer-based programs in course design. I am a strong believer that there is no substitute for being out on the course for long periods of time because this makes you more attuned to the natural aspects of the site which you can build into the course and make it look as though it really belongs and enhances the area."

When you talk with Kelly Moran, you very soon realize that he is not the type of course designer who delights in massive movement of soil to create an artificial landscape and that his is more the science of makeover rather than major cosmetology. "I am not trying to create something obviously man-made but to enhance and emphasize the natural attributes of the chosen site. The same thing goes for plants and trees. I research the plants which are native to the region. For example, here at Laurel Links we have a very sandy soil. Native materials such as bayberries, plums and fescues will be used extensively. The most important thing to me is not to bring any baggage when I start to look at the site for a course. I do not believe in 'signature' holes or in recreating famous holes from other courses. The overriding objective is to look for really great golf holes coming out of the natural landscape."

Kelly Moran is a golf course designer who has played and loved the game since an early age. He also is of the school of thought that golf is a game to be enjoyed, ideally, on foot. "Many people playing golf have to make use of golf carts because playing 18 holes is a physical stress to them but for those who can and should walk I try and make my courses 'walker friendly'. After all, if you play a golf course and new book, Discover the Joy of Acrylic Painting, will take place on June 24, from 4-7 p.m. A workshop is also planned by the three authors, "Contemplative Journal Retreat: A Creative Expression Using Watercolor, Pen & Ink, Images and Words," at the Siena Spirituality Center in Water Mill, Aug. 8-11. Call 734-5426.

EAST END ARTS COUNCIL - a juried exhibition, "Flora and Fauna," is on display through June 16. Deb Whitney, of Whitney Art Works, is curator of this exhibit. The Council is also accepting submissions for a commemorative poster celebrating their "Wine Press Concert Series." The deadline is Wednesday, May 16. Submissions must be in the form of 8x10 color photographs and have ID labels on the back. The Council is located at 133 East Main Street, Riverhead, NY. Call 727-0900 for further details.

PRIME GALLERY - the North Fork's newest gallery is located on the Main Road in Southold. The works of owner Lynn Curlee, author and artist of Rushmore, Liberty and Brooklyn Bridge are currently exhibited along with the artist's labels he has created for Pindar and Duckwalk Vineyards. Designer Nicholas Atkins shares the space with his fabulous, one-of-a-kind home furnishings. PRIME is also offering interior design consultations. 765-4979.

OVERTON GALLERY - at the Riverhead Library is currently exhibiting the work of well-known LI artists, Joan Rogers and Sona Hoefman. Through May 30. Located at 330 Court Street, Riverhead. 727-3228.

WHITNEY ART WORKS - currently on exhibit, through May 28, the works of painter Nancy Wisemann-Widrig, "The Moveable Studio." Ms. Wisemann-Widrig divides her time between Southold, Maine and Culebra and has exhibited throughout the US. Located at 414 Front Street, Greenport, Whitney's current hours are Sat-Sun. 12-5 p.m. Call 477-0745.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

The summer well on its way, with guests coming out for Memorial Day weekend there's lots to do and lots to eat here in the Hamptons. And of course, lot's of shopping. Let's do it!

Hot off the press, Sondra Lynn, licensed acupuncturist will be joining the team of the Natural Beauty Spa on Main Street in East Hampton. Call for info. 329-0006.

Check out The Elegant John at the Red Horse Plaza in East Hampton for a super one half price deal on Royal Velvet and Charisma towels. Now is definitely the time to stock up for the summer. Don't forget to take a look at the fabulous lamps that are one third off regular prices. What a deal!

At Twice Upon A Bagel on Montauk Highway in Wainscott there is so much to choose from it is really impossible for me to include everything in this column. For breakfast, lunch and catering, everything is baked fresh daily on the premises. Open at 6 a.m. there are breakfast specials that include platters, muffins, bakery, bagels and bialys ($7.50 for a bakers dozen), wraps, sandwiches, and much more. With your health in mind, egg white salad, turkey meat loaf, veggie meat loaf that is held together with humus, keylime tuna, homemade humus, organic health bread, oh I can go on and on...Give Steve a call at 537-5553 he will be happy to help you.

Stubbs and Wootton has opened its Southampton store and is featuring many new "hip and fun" styles and their signature grosgrain ribbon belts along with the introduction of their line of heels which incorporate a beautiful open toe sandal in faux crocodile, closed toe mule in real lizard and printed silks. Oprah's O magazine has featured the Stubbs and Wootton grosgrain ribbon slides in its May issue and the May edition of Elle magazine featured a belt from their collection also. Look for their new website to see all the newest designs and place an order online at www.stubbsandwootton.com. Love this store...Check it out!

If you're looking for Norah's she has moved and is now located at 46 Jobs Lane in Southampton. If you're looking for great fashions at great prices, look for Norah's brand new ladies merchandise from casual to dressy to fun stuff including accessories. Go for it!

What a "giant final warehouse spring cleaning sale" at the The John Rogers Outlet that is happening for three days only, Friday, May 18 through Sunday May 20, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. This giant sale is taking place at 171 Mariner Drive in Southampton and includes garden teak furniture, benches, dining tables, chairs, and coffee tables showroom samples including new unique designs from the recent spring furniture market. I'll be that you can almost furnish your entire home with this sale...

The straw bags have finally arrived at eden rocks on Jobs Lane in Southampton. Hurry, the early bird always gets the worm...

Speaking of birds, thanks to Apex Windows for doing such a great job. The windows are so clean, the birds think they live inside the house with me. I wouldn't mind, but Tino Tennariello, my German Schnauzer would never allow it! Give them at -877-273-9178.

Heading home I decided that I would stop in to the Country Gardens (formally Agway) on Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton to pick up the birdbath that I picked out for Mother's Day. Lo and behold, there were plenty of new ones there so I decided to get another one for my deck so that I can watch the little critters take their morning bath before I go to work. There is a very nice supply of the cutest birdbaths starting at $59.99 and up... Believe me, you will love them, but they are flying out the door...The baths that is not the birds!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

"EVOCATIONS" AT NABI GALLERY

"Evocations" is an apt title for the current show at Sag Harbor's Nabi Gallery. It obviously refers to the ways that memories can conjure up images in our mind – the word "our" denoting not only the artists whose work gives form to these memories but also the spectator who is motivated by such art. Thus, Johann Gilbert's small landscapes bring forth his recollections of Red Hook, New York, their warm, comfortable feeling enhanced by the country-style wood mounting. This configuration forms a frame-within-a-frame, another method of capturing our precious memories for all times.

Even so, a few of Mr. Gilbert's pieces are not peaceful; there's one, particularly, that evokes a stormy setting. But even that one brings a smile of recognition to the viewer, as it must have to the artist as well.

New York resident Susan Sugar's pieces are similarly evocative, her Key West scenes giving us a different perspective on the area well-known for its spectacular sunsets. Her images are subtle and meditative, like Mr. Gilbert's. It's also curious that Ms. Sugar has a varied

Valta is another artist who, while living in the area, is influenced by special places, like Montana, her yellow hues and low horizons presenting diverse images of the state's "Big Sky."

While Maria Warach's images are home-grown, her pieces are arresting and mood-evoking, nonetheless, especially her "Beach Plums in Bloom at Northwest Creek" and her pastel, "Dune."

Roisin Bateman is another good example of an artist who has traveled to many parts of the globe, finally settling on the East End. It's a pleasure to see how the artist has interpreted an environment in an abstract mode, her dark colors, strong strokes and both vertical and horizontal formats adding energy to the subdued quality conveyed by most of the exhibit

The show's prevailing traits, however, remain gentle and calming ones – giving real meaning to the word, "Evocations."

"Evocations" will be on view until May 27.

Work by Valta

background in theatre, dance and architecture: her art work, in fact, juxtaposes time, movement and space, respectively, like the other art forms she is involved with.

Guy de Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

FUNNY FAST FOOD FOR THOUGHT

I realize that McCool, as in One Night at McCool's, sounds like a new soft drink from the people who burp out a million burgers a day... to be consumed by a half-million-a-day beef eaters (not the British Guards or Gin). In the movie, McCool's is a crummy bar in which begins the riotously sleazy comedy/morality tale told in Rashomon style. (Three different viewpoints.) Therefore, it is like a Big Mac. The triple-layered, greasy meatiness is slathered with the special sauciness of America's craze for sexual materialism, squished in between pickled fetishism, sharp oniony desire, whipped cheesy meltdowns of artificiality and the tantalizing plump buns of commercial porn. Well-done by a Norwegian director, Harald Zwart, whose distant viewpoint has a sharp eye for our bad taste... he shows us our consumerism need for conformity, "things" and the comfort of trite repetition. Stereotypical thinking is represented by three men: An unambitious bartender at McCool's, Matt Dillon. His cousin, a lawyer with everything, Paul Reiser, and a grieving widower/homicide detective, John Goodman. They all immediately fall under the spell of a voluptuous woman... a ravishing type... the type people want to ravish... an absolutely stunning Liv Tyler.

One Night At McCool's

HOLD THE ONION AND GOOD LOOKER

My gosh! I think I, too, have succumbed to the not-stereotypical-current-young Ms., known simply in the movie as Jewel. Thick-waisted and not too large abreast non-the-less, makes her attractive to one's basic instincts... like the movie, Basic Instincts... Yoiks! That reminds me, Michael Douglas, another odd-ball character, is in McCool's, is it's producer, to boot. Replete with a big hair piece and oversized teeth he listens to Matt Dillon's woeful tale that all begins... One Night at McCool's....

HERO IN A PICKLE & KETCHUP ON THE SIDE

Closing the bar one night, Dillon casts his shiftless eyes onto the razzle-dazzling Jewel, Tyler. He's gone! Before you can say, "love at first sight," he is involved in a couple of murders and the Jewel is set in the run down, old house his mother left him. She only wants what every nice young lady wants... a little house that she can fix up... a little paint and a pink chenille cover on the toilet seat lid and Kleenex box and, of course, every home should have a DVD player! A home is not a home without a DVD player. Unfortunately, this could get poor Matt involved in another murder, and, gee, he really is perfectly happy sitting at home drinking beer in just a broken down old place. Bingo, there's another murder and Goodman, the sad, lonely detective is on the case... he sets his eyes on Jewel... POW! He's on her case, totally smitten with the sex kitten. He sees her in one of those car wash fantasies. The pulsing hose, the soap suds, the headlights (the car's and her's) the inner thighs, the curvaceous fenders... the sun... the shining glints, a halo. He's gone on her.

ONE MAN'S MEAT

Meanwhile, Reiser, the ambitious lawyer has only almost anything. So, he sees in the fabulous Jewel (who is all things to all men) that which the firm and his wife and children do not afford him... a good, sound, black-leathery, whipping, Sadoomasochistic, you say. Liv's Jewel can adapt... Reiser's house is bigger and has a DVD player!

A DVD IN HIS BVDS

As all these loose ends twist together and as Douglas' role is known, the plaited conclusion explodes into cohesive bedlam. This smacking Big Mac of a movie is not to everyone's taste. The lettuce is in shreds, the plump bun is seedy and the tomato tasteless but, there's no doubt that Liv gives it great flavor. Where's the beef? It's primarily in the terrific, first-produced script by Stan Seidel, who very sadly passed away before the movie's completion. So, it's overdone... that's the way the public likes it.

"They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2001

FROM PAINTER JULIAN SCHNABEL'S HUGE STUDIO IN MONTAUK A FILM OF ANOTHER PAINTER'S CAREER

So strong and memorable are the colorfast reputations of Jackson Pollock and Willem de Kooning, even their East Hampton studios are as familiar to us as our own kitchens. Their images are so bright, other East End artists seem only to appear as silhouettes, dimmed by the glaring fame of the two spotlighted painters. Over-shadowed, too, are the other areas of the Hamptons... such as Montauk, where artists like photographer Richard Avedon, playwright Edward Albee and painter/film maker Julian Schnabel, work at their art. Certainly, Schnabel's studio must be known. Close to the water, the walls stand over 16 feet high and there is no ceiling... no roof. No doubt this is to insure that he will not be hindered in anyway... not the size of his paintings or his ego... and now, what work he does there. For now, he is seriously making movies.

His first feature film, BASQUIAT, is appropriately about a painter's career. Jean Michel Basquiat was a young graffiti artist who found flaring fame as a studio-painter and, just as quickly burned out when he died of a heroin overdose... he was 27 years of age. This was in 1988, a period Mr. Schnabel knows well. It was the peak of his painting career. The 80s were a time of fast big money, that went as fast as the stock market ground it out. Like chopped meat, a lot of it went bad quickly but a lot of people got fat. Known as the era of greed, buying became a sport and art galleries thrived. Andy Warhol was a king of sorts and with his nod, BASQUIAT became a sort of Little Prince.

Mr. Schnabel wrote and directed Basquiat, from a story developed by Michael Thomas Holman. In it he is Albert Milo, portrayed by the marvelous Brit actor Gary Olman. Schnabel does not appear in the film but, most of his family does as does his studio and home. Milo's paintings, of course, are his and, so are Basquiat's. Basquiat's father would not give permission for the use of any of his son's work so, Schnabel painted all the work seen in the film. As some of you might remember, Mr. Schnabel, kind of began his film making career doing slide shows at Guild Hall. I'm kidding a bit but, he's done a few there and as you also know, his recent movie, Before Night Falls, won an Academy Award Nomination for its star, Javier Bardem. Not surprisingly, there is similarity in both. They begin with the protagonists as boys. Jean Michel is first seen taken by his mother to view Picasso's Guernica. He is pristine in dress and appearance and when his face lights up with wonder upon viewing the huge painting he wears the glistening crown of the Little Prince. When next seen he is wearing dreadlocks and living in a cardboard box and avidly needing to draw and paint. With help, he is a star in the art world, but, dreaming still of surfing in the South Pacific... another world... another time... away from the grime of a time sullied by corruptive greed.

Jeffrey Wright, gives a remarkable portrait of Basquiat and what a supporting cast: Olman as Milo and David Bowie as Warhol. Then, there is Benicio Del Toro, Dennis Hopper, Parker Posey, Courtney Love, Claire Forlani, Christopher Walken, Willem Dafoe and so many more.

We hope to see you when, Michael Holman, who developed the story will be with us to discuss the making of this memorable film. For this Saturday May 19th, Woody Allen Project, the guest will be Joanne De Simone, who'll tell you all you ever wanted to know about Woody. Saturday May 26th, 2 PM

Sixth Annual Music Festival Of The Hamptons

Amidst the tranquil breezes of the Hamptons, a sample of the finest musicians will gather for the Sixth Annual Music Festival of the Hamptons, July 6 through July 21, 2001. For two weeks, a series of performances, including a Mozart opera, chamber orchestra concerts, the Moiseiwitsch Piano Recital Series, as well as a poignant symposium under the direction of Lukas Foss, will celebrate the artistry of world class performers in the magical setting of Eastern Long Island.

"It's truly thrilling to experience such extraordinary growth," said Eleanor Sage Leonard, Founder and President of The Music Festival of the Hamptons. "As we enter our sixth season, we're now presenting two weekends of contemporary music events in addition to our two weeks of classical music."

"I am looking forward to an adventurous program," said Foss. "One in which the classics will be performed as if the ink were not yet dry and the new works with the awe usually given to classical music."

The Music Festival of the Hamptons, which commences with an All Mozart Gala Opening weekend (including Mozart's one-act opera "The Impresario"), provides artists a unique opportunity to highlight their artistry by performing and collaborating in the Hamptons' serene setting. This summer's performances feature the talent and leadership of conductor, composer, and pianist Lukas Foss, the Musical Festival of the Hamptons' Artistic Director; conductor and pianist Scott Dunn, who serves as Assistant Artistic Director; clarinetists Richard Stoltzman and Igor Begelman; composer-pianist Richard Rodney Bennett; cabaret star Mary Cleere-Haran; violinists Philip Quint and Michael Guttman; flautist Carol Wincenc; the Canadian Brass; and vocalists Judith Kellock, Susan Narucki, Scott Murphee, and Robert White.

In addition, the 2001 Festival will present a distinguished Moiseiwitsch Piano Recital Series, recognizing emerging great pianists. A 20th Century Sampler, a gathering of contemporary composers, critics, and distinguished performers, will present a symposium and concert-examining directions in music today. The concert will feature premieres of small ensemble works by Lukas Foss, Theodor Antoniou, Raymond Yiu, along with older works by Bartok and Lannis Xenaxis' Morsima-Amorsima (which Foss premiered in Athens in 1962.)

Inspired by the spirit and art of Benno Moiseiwitsch, the Music Festival of the Hamptons was created by Eleanor Sage Leonard six years ago to carry the torch of a rich musical heritage. Through its distinct artistic vision, a blend of classical and twentieth century music, the Music Festival of the Hamptons reaches out to new generations of listeners as a significant and permanent musical entity on the East End of Long Island.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

It's that magical time of year when a blanket of green covers the landscape, tree branches are heavy with bloom and the sun consistently warms us. Overheard chitchat at a checkout supermarket counter from folk who can hardly believe that Memorial Day is almost here.

East End farm stands are opening at a quickening pace. Asparagus, spinach and kale are just some of the names displayed on the slide out letters of farm stand signs. The bounty of local homegrown is all the inspiration I need. Freshness is key and the flavors of fresh from the farm demand little adornment. Briefly steam elegant leafy baby bok choy then simply gloss with the best extra-virgin olive oil you can find. Their crunchy stalks have a mild, juicy sweetness. Asparagus may be one of the first vegetables to herald spring, but when it's local and fresh the simplest recipe is distinguished.

Piles of splashy red rhubarb stalks are just waiting to pop into a pie. For those of you who love to bake you might tuck the following rhubarb and raspberry pie into your file. Memorial Day is sooner than you think.

STEAMED BABY BOK-CHOY

Bok choy, sometimes confused with Chinese cabbage, has smooth rounded stalks and leafier green tops than its cabbage counterpart. The diminutive baby bok choy is as pretty to look at as they are delicious to eat. The simple steamed dish below needs nothing more than a gloss of a very good extra-virgin olive oil to bring out its mild sweetness.

Serves 4-6

4-6 even-sized baby bok choy

Coarse (kosher) salt
Freshly ground pepper
Extra-virgin olive oil

1. Trim away any bruised outer leaves if necessary. Rinse and pat dry with paper towels. Arrange them on a steamer rack over simmering water and steam about 5 minutes, or until just tender at the base. Transfer to a warm platter. Season to taste with salt and pepper then drizzle with extra-virgin olive oil and turn to coat. Serve at once.

Note: I rarely use my microwave oven but this is one of the few times it came in handy. After steaming the bok choy I arranged them in a deep glass dish and seasoned them with salt, pepper and olive oil to coat. I covered the dish with paper towel and refrigerated the vegetable for several hours. Later, after bringing the bok choy to room temperature I put them in the microwave to reheat for 1 1/2 minutes. They were perfect.

ASPARAGUS IN BROTH

Serves 4

20 thin or medium asparagus
1/2 -3/4 cup chicken or vegetable broth
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1-2 tablespoons unsalted butter, cut into small pieces
Chopped parsley for garnish

1. Break the asparagus where they naturally bend and discard end portion. Trim away the triangular scales along the spears, leaving the tender scales at the head.

Rinse and set aside.

2. Put asparagus in a skillet, arranging the heavier spears close together in center of skillet, graduating thinner ones to the sides of the pan. Pour over broth to barely cover and bring to a boil. Season lightly with salt and pepper.

3. Simmer briskly for 4-7 minutes, depending on thickness of asparagus. When asparagus is barely tender, add butter, bit by bit until butter melts. Transfer asparagus to a warm serving dish and immediately reduce liquids in skillet to a thin glaze. Pour reduction over the asparagus and garnish with parsley. Serve warm.

RHUBARB RASPBERRY PIE

Young tart red rhubarb and sweet raspberries combine in a winning pie. Be sure to discard the green rhubarb leaves at the top of the stalks as they contain a high concentration of oxalic acid and are poisonous if eaten.

Serves 8

Your own or Frozen pastry dough, enough for two crusts

1 1/2 pounds rhubarb, trimmed
1 cup plus 2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
3 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
2 cups raspberries

Egg wash

1 large egg
1 tablespoon milk

1. Prepare your own dough and chill for several hours before rolling out or defrost pastry dough, overnight in refrigerator, if using. Divide the dough into 2 pieces. One should be slightly smaller, for the bottom crust. Wrap larger piece with waxed paper and refrigerate. On a lightly floured surface with a lightly floured rolling pin roll out the smaller piece of dough to about 1/8-inch thick. With the aid of your rolling pin transfer the dough and fit into a 9-inch pie tin or glass pie plate. Trim edges with a sharp paring knife leaving a 1-inch overhang. Put into the refrigerator to chill.

2. Meanwhile trim rhubarb and cut crosswise into 1/2-inch slices. Transfer to a bowl and sprinkle over 1-cup sugar, cinnamon, cornstarch and lemon juice. Stir to mix. Gently fold in raspberries with a large rubber spatula being careful not to blemish the raspberries.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees

3. In a small bowl whisk together the egg and milk for the egg wash. Remove pastry-lined pie plate from refrigerator and spoon in the rhubarb mixture, mounding the top. Brush edges of pastry with egg wash. Roll out remaining pastry and drape the round over the filling. Trim the edges leaving a 1-inch overhang. Crimp or pinch the edges decoratively. With a small sharp paring knife score a decorative pattern on the top with a tiny hole or two to allow steam to escape while baking. Brush top with egg wash and sprinkle with remaining 2 tablespoons sugar. Transfer pie to a parchment paper-lined baking sheet and bake on middle rack about 45-50 minutes, or until crust is golden brown. (If pastry is browning too quickly, tent with foil.) Transfer pie to a rack and cool for at least one hour to set filling.

Silvia Lehrer's Spring/Summer cooking schedule is now available. Schedule begins with a hands-on class, "Taking the Fear Out of Phyllo," on Saturday, May 19 at 10:30am. Students will prepare a variety of appetizers, main dishes and desserts and then lunch on their creations. Class size is limited and pre-registration is required. Please call (631) 537 7831.

TASTE OF THE NATION IS MAY 20

Don't forget: The Sixth Annual Share our Strength's Taste of the Nation East End Restaurant Ball event will be held at East Hampton's James Lane Cafe at The Hedges Inn on Sunday, May 20 from 5 to 9 p.m. Share Our Strength works toward ending hunger and poverty in the U.S. and around the world. The event, presented by American Express, is a gala of food and drink that also includes: a silent auction, raffle, goodie bags, live music and over 20 of the Hamptons' top restaurants and caterers, plus beverages from select distributors. Tickets are $75. For more information call (631) 324-4181 and ask for Nan Noel.

GEORGE MARTIN IS OPEN

A new restaurant, George Martin (204-8700), replaces the venerable Peter's Backstreet in Southampton. It's owned and operated by George Korten who also owns several popular restaurants in Nassau County. The chef, who is also part owner, is Frank Greco. Appetizers, such as spinach and lump crab spring rolls, range in price from $5.50 - $12.50. There is a bistro section on the menu featuring casual affordable items, like a traditional lobster roll, ranging in price from $10 to $18. Higher end entrees, like herb crusted filet of halibut with red flannel hash, range from $18 to $23 and steaks range from $22 - $28. George Martin is open seven days for dinner and will begin serving lunch daily June 1.

OCEANS GRILLFISH & STEAK IS OPEN

There's a new eatery on the Napeague stretch in Amagansett—Ocean's Grillfish & Steak (267-6980). They feature local seafood, specializing in char-grilled fish, whole lobsters and prime aged beef in a casual setting at affordable prices. The décor is tropical-inspired, and there's a raw bar and outdoor seating. Lunch and dinner are served daily from 11 a.m.-11 p.m..

Side Dish By Aji Jones

NEW: RAW BAR AT CITARELLA TO GO

Citarella To Go (726-3636) in Water Mill will unveil a new raw bar on Memorial Day weekend, featuring such items as oysters, clams, stone crab claws, lobster, mussels, shrimp, seafood salads, ceviche, grilled calamari, gazpacho and mixed garden salads. The raw bar selections will be available Thursday through Sunday until 8 p.m. They'll also be offering a two-for-one deal on beer and wine from 4 p.m. - 6 p.m. For the Citarella experience at home, seafood lovers can avail themselves of Citarella's new "Raw Bar Buffet" option for catered events.

HAMPTONS RESORTS AND HOSPITALITY DONATES TO BENEFITS

Now there's more than food to look forward to at summer benefits. Hampton Resorts and Hospitality, LLC, owner/operator of The Atlantic, The Bentley, and The Capri hotels in Southampton has announced that they will donate what will amount to $50,000 worth of lodging, in the form of auction item gift certificates, to charity event organizers this summer. Food events that will benefit include Share Our Strength's Taste of the Nation on May 20 and the Taste of the Hamptons event at Wolfer Estate on June 30.

THURSDAY NIGHTS AT THE COAST GRILL

The Coast Grill (283-2277) is adding Thursday nights to the dinner service schedule effective immediately. A special offered every Thursday night will be an East End Lobster Bake which includes: a whole steamed lobster, potatoes, corn, clams and mussels for $20. The regular menu is also available. The Coast Grill opens at 5 p.m. on Thursdays and is open Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 5 p.m. as well.

THE DISH HEARS THAT... SPRINGS IS HOPPING!

If you haven't been to the corner of Three Mile Harbor and Flaggy Hole Road lately, check it out. This once sleepy corner in Springs is becoming a bona fide foodie destination. Our friends from WordHampton, the restaurant PR firm, have taken over one corner. Across the street is the Maidstone Market where egg sandwich aficionados gather in the mornings. And down the road on Springs-Fireplace is the always reliable Pizza n Things.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face: Good Enough To Eat, Or Drink

This week, Dan's Papers is celebrating food. I have been advised to do the same. But I am so worried that Silvia will do something wonderful as usual and you will walk around with some encrusted fish on your face or a fragrant marinara as a hair freshener by mistake. So, I thought by putting the warning at the beginning you will avoid all sorts of stares and grimaces as you go about your week!

Throughout the years we have all tried the latest tropical fruit or vegetable on our faces and hair. Some worked and some simply did not. I believed that they were put in columns as an added filler when the author ran out of ideas to write about. At least I used to think that. When I began working on fashion magazines and the editors would come in with an arsenal of fruit and vegetables, I thought that this was lunch. Hardly. Out came the blenders and the most amazing concoctions were whipped up right before my eyes... and of course, everything was taste-tested. It was my job to apply these blended ingredients on the models faces, using the most creative swirls I could come up with. The girls always managed a few ooo's and ahhh's which I was to understand that this particular mask was soothing, especially fragranced or someother comforting opinion. I began to try them myself and was amazed that some of them really DO work and they are fun and inexpensive to use.

Below I am giving a sample of a few of the tried and true 'recipes'. Get out your blender, masher, or fork. Don't be afraid to try some of them. Fruits and vegetables are good for the inside of us as well as our outsides.

Be careful of some of the ingredients around your eyes. And of course, if it isn't edible, don't consume it!

HAIR RINSE:

1/4 cup of your favorite Mouthwash
1 cup of water

Mix together and pour through your hair. Massage for a minute or two and rinse thoroughly. Using a mint mouthwash will impart your hair with a wonderful fresh minty fragrance.

BEER RINSE:

1oz. of water
2 tspns. of cider vinegar
7 drops of Lemon Essential Oil
1 oz of Beer
5 drops of Rosemary Essential Oil
5 drops of Calendula Oil ( this is optional for blondes)

Mix all together and use as a final rinse. Rinse well. Adds protein to as well as shine and thickness.

AVOCADO CONDITIONER:

2 tspns. avocado oil
2 tab. olive oil
2 tspns. canola oil
2 tab. vegetable shortening
2 tspns. coconut oil
2 tspns. honey

In a saucepan, slowly heat all ingredients except for the honey, then remove from heat and let cool. Add honey and stir until well mixed. Massage the mixture into the hair and then comb through and leave on for 15-20 minutes. Rinse with warm water.

BANANAS:

DID YOU KNOW?

The Body Shop uses 250,000 bananas each year for their banana products?

Guatemalan ladies often used bananas to help relieve dry skin? If you can talk yourself into a nice leisurely rest for 20 minutes or so, slice a banana and then lay the slices on our face to allow the oils and vitamins to moisturize your skin.

If you are looking for an exfoliating mask, blend a mashed banana with white cosmetic clay and apply.

Bananas mixed with a little butter and then rubbed into the hands also make a great softening cream. Rinse

RAW EGGS:

An egg makes a great conditioner for your hair. Simply mix it with 2 tabs. of castor oil and massage into your hair... rinse well. Use this before shampooing.

If you use a whole egg whisked with a little lemon juice and condition your hair with this concoction, it will add great shine.

CUCUMBERS:

Place cucumbers, skin and all into a blender and apply to your face. It not only tones your skin, it cleans out clogged pores. This feels great after a day at the beach. It is so cooling on skin that has had too much sun.

CRISCO:

This has stood the test of time. It has been used for many years not only for severe dry skin but for different types of skin ailments such as psoriasis and eczema.

Not only the foods we put on the outside, but the inside ones make a tremendous difference in the look of our skin and hair. Vitamins are so important. I once heard on a radio show that if you are lacking minerals and your skin and hair are suffering, and you are not taking a supplement, you may as well be licking the sidewalk for all the benefits you are getting. The skin expert recommended Nature's Plus Sustained Release Ultra Hair. I have been taking them now for about a year and find they have made a tremendous difference in the way my hair is compared to back then. Make sure you get a variety of minerals and essential fatty acids into your diet. You will begin to notice dry skin and hair breakage and just slow growth if you are not getting the sufficient amounts of nutrients. Look to Mother Nature for help on the outside as well!

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

It's amazing how fast we forget things, such as the weather a year ago. Last week it was unusually warm for early May, but guess what, we had the same exact weather pattern the same week a year ago. I was speaking to my friends Lyle and Susie Wells at Wells Homestead Acres Farmstand last week. They keep records on sales every day, but in addition, they keep records on weather conditions. Almost to the day, the weather was the same as last year. It is quite dry right now; we haven't gotten a substantial rain in about a month. I have heard some people say, "I've never seen it so dry for May," and "The weather has been unusually cold." The reality is this is typical "Long Island" weather for this time of year. I remember my Dad said one year after planting potatoes, they had to irrigate in May to get the potatoes out of the ground. And it was very dry that entire season. In fact, they watered potatoes right until September. I know myself, that May weather can be hot one day and cold the next. I remember cultivating potatoes with my winter coat on! In May no less.

The dry weather is good for some farmers, though. Phil Schmitt and the vegetable farmers who produce lettuce, spinach, and leafy vegetables find the quality to be superb when they can control the water. It's easier to irrigate crops than to have too much rain. The greenhouse industry would prefer dry, sunny days as well. With the current weather pattern, homeowners are out in force buying bedding plants and the like, so it's good business at the moment!

Now, this leads me to my message for the week. Farming is a weather related industry. We can't control Mother Nature. Recently, I have received a number of phone calls from homeowners complaining about dust. My answer of course is: make it rain then it won't be so dusty. Why did you build your house right next to a farm if you don't like the nuisances associated with farming? Farming practices make odors, make noise; they make dust when working dry soil, etc. Our farmers are good neighbors and are concerned about bothering their neighbors, but some things are beyond their control. Farmers are already running irrigation motors. Some are rather noisy. But the nuisance is short term; as soon as it rains the irrigation stops. I think it is important to remind our citizens who have moved out to the East End that this still a farming community. Many people enjoy the quality of life here but don't want to know about the nuisances that come with farming practices. Lighten up, and be kind to our farmers. They are under enough pressure already without being aggravated by their neighbors.

Anyhow, that's my beef for this week! Sometimes we all need some sensitivity training on things we don't know about or understand. Stay tuned.

LaLa's Tail, er, Tale

By LaLa Simm
(as told to Susan)

Susan took me in several years ago when I was down and out and living in an orphanage in East Quogue. I was lucky. I don't know what attracted Susan to me but I am happy that she and her husband have taken me into their home. We had to go through a little adjustment period, which is normal, I guess. After all, they had never had a cat before.

When Susan got me home from the orphanage, I was dreaming about big down comforters and gourmet meals. But she thought I was too little to run around the house at night, and so my quarters became a bathroom with newspaper on the floor. I was so uncomfortable that I ended up sleeping in the sink! This was not something to purr about.

Eventually, they trusted me enough to let me sleep where ever I wanted. But that's much later in this story.

As I grew older, Susan started to demand things of me. She wanted me to "be nice" and not run around the house. The truth is, I do what I want when they're not around or when I don't think they are looking.

Sometimes though, I get caught. Like the time I scratched the fabric on one of the living room chairs. Susan was mad! She was yelling unintelligibly at me. (Of course, I can never really quite figure out what either one of them is talking about.) But after that incident, David took me to this terrible place, even worse than the orphanage. He left me there for three days. There were lots of us in small apartments and the people were scary. They did something to me so that now I can't climb like I used to. And when I knead the blanket that I sleep on, it doesn't feel the same. When I got back to the house, I overheard them talking about me. I was now a "house" cat, whatever that means.

Which reminds me, why can't David leave the screens off the windows? I can't tell you how many times I would have caught birds if those stupid screens weren't there. Once I snuck up on a bird that was sitting on the railing of the porch. The bird didn't see me crouching and slowly inching my way up to the door. Then when I jumped and tried to grab my prey, I went face first into the screen. That was sooo humiliating.

Both Susan and David think that they have trained me, but really, I have trained them. When I want to eat, I simply walk into the kitchen and tell them. I sit down and they give me treats. They think I am sitting and begging for food like a (gasp!) dog. If that's what I have to do to teach them when to feed me, so be it. And when I don't feel good because I swallowed too much fur, I throw up on the rug (which makes Susan crazy) and then go hide in the closet. David gives me this stuff to soothe my stomach and it makes me feel better, but sometimes he forgets. I wonder how he would like it if the doctor forgot to give him his ulcer pills?

It may seem that I am unhappy at Susan and David's house, but I'm not. Early in the morning when David gets up, I let him pick me up and we sit on the couch. He watches CNBC or ESPN and I let him pet me. He is really good at scratching me in just the right spots.

Later in the day, I like to jump on Susan's lap while she is typing at the computer. The sound of the keys clicking is soothing to me and I am hopeful that some day I will get a chance to catch that mouse she often talks about.

I am, however, embarrassed by one thing that has happened to me during my time with Susan and David. My name. When I was brought home from the orphanage, they told me that my name was Skeezix, which was fine. For those of you who don't know, Skeezix was a film star and a role model for kittens everywhere. I think that Susan has called me by that name once. My "real" name and the name that both Susan and David refer to me by, is LaLa. They coo, "Come on LaLa" in that singsong voice that humans use when trying to talk to us. I guess it could be worse, but I think that my mother would have preferred a more masculine name for one of her boys.

When all is said and done, I guess I'll stay with Susan and David, despite the name issue. They are kind to me and I now have my own bed with a big soft comforter and lots of pillows. I can sleep there in the sun and dream of hunting in the wild like my ancestors did, any time I want. I just know I would be the best hunter in catdom and I ...Uh oh, Susan's calling....maybe she has some food for me....I hope it's the kind with the giblet chunks and gravy...

Well, maybe I don't care so much about being in the wild. I doubt that bird would taste much like Fancy Feast anyway.

POLICE BLOTTER

In East Hampton a New York resident was firing up the grill when the incendiary properties of the device exceeded the requirements of any repast. The East Hampton Fire Department was on the scene and the conflagration was subdued, with some damage to the deck.

* * *

Where's the sidewalk? In Southampton Village a Hampton Bays man was arrested for walking down the middle of Pulaski Street and, not surprisingly, getting in the way of traffic. In addition to disorderly conduct, he was also charged with resisting arrest, when he allegedly gave the arresting officer a bit of difficulty in the process of being apprehended.

A pizza parlor in East Hampton experienced some unpleasantness with a customer – who came in the store, ordered a pizza then disdained to take it, allegedly harrassed the counterman in regard to his ethnic background, and, to top it off, pushed an extra large cheese pizza off the counter to the floor. He then left the store. The beleaguered counterman told police he did not wish to file charges, but only desired that the above customer not ever return to the store.

* * *

What was that Beatle song – about someone coming in through the bathroom window? Well, someone did just that in East Hampton at a store on Newtown Lane (the window was unlocked) and made off with $500 left in the cash register. The store was closed at the time.

* * *

A woman was refused a seat on a Sunrise Coach bus because she wished to bring her dog aboard. She was advised that carriers are required for other than human mammals.

* * *

Speaking of canines: In East Hampton, a David's Lane resident told police he had been unpleasantly accosted by a yellow Labrador retriever. One with no tags, yet. The complainant also reported that the beast was chasing cars and joggers. But the authorities could not find the rambunctious creature.

* * *

An elderly resident of Water Mill told police that for the second time in as many years her screen door had been pried open but nothing else on the property had been disturbed. Those flies are getting clever.

Dan's LETTERS

COULDN'T FIND WHO'S HERE THERE

Dear Dan,

As a long time admirer of your stuff – when I see the Dan R. by-line I know I'll be interested, informed or amused. So much for the kudos. But I've got a beef, occasioned by the Who's Here story in your current issue. The Ilana Rosenfeld article invites readers in the last paragraph to attend a lecture May 11 at the Ross Institute. Try and do it. A couple of phone numbers provided by your fairly cooperative operator directed me to Ross and therein lies the seed of another story by Dan R. Pick up your cellular and try reaching a hotel, an airline, anybody and you get 90% of the time, a canned voice inviting you to press one for this, press two for that, etc., etc. What the hell's going on lately?

In any case all I wanted to do is attend that lecture (backache for two years – no doctor here in New York has offered much) maybe Ms. Rosenfeld (no M.D.) has something to say. Probably somebody who has latched onto something).

If Dan's Papers would really like to perform a service just make me a reservation.

FOOLING THE CHILDREN

Dear Dan,

I figured out what to do with the hats from the 35th anniversary I bought at our office. I gave two of them to my sons and they posed for pictures.

They love the hats...of course they don't know that they are OUTDATED (literally...hehehe). They just assume that I picked them up last week, at your 35th anniversary.

Thought you would like to know what happened to two of your collector item hats!

CELL PHONE TOWER HAZARDS

Dear Dan,

A contract has been signed between the North Sea Fire District and a commercial firm which, if required Town permits are issued, would allow the firm to erect a 100-foot high cell phone communications tower on property which the Fire District owns adjacent to the substation at the corner of Noyac Road and Dover Avenue in Roses Grove.

Numerous published studies have shown that radio and microwave radiation emanating from such towers pose serious health hazards to residents living up to three miles from the towers. References to or extracts from a number of these studies are available on request.

Some of the residents living within the area which would be affected are actively opposing the project, and are gathering signatures on a petition to the Town of Southampton urging that permission to build the tower be denied. We are soliciting the help of other concerned citizens who are willing to sign the petition, and/or assist in obtaining addition signatures. A copy of the petition will also be available for residents' signatures at the North Sea community House on Noyac Road opposite the fire station in North Sea, on Sunday May 6 from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., and on Thursday May 10 from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. Anyone who would like to help may phone Ted Magee at 287-9443 or Don McGown at 283-7069.

SHOW RESPECT FOR OUR VETERANS

Dear Dan,

I have been a loyal reader for many years, and I must say that I usually love Dan's Papers! It's filled with interesting articles and your quirky sense of humor appeals to me. However, I was really disturbed by a recent cartoon that you published. It was in your paper a few weeks ago and was a parody of raising the flag at Iwo Jima. As a veteran and as an American, it bothered me to see this historic event reduced to bad humor. Too many Americans died during W.W. II to ever make fun of any of the historic moments. I hope you never publish anything like that again, and I feel you owe a heartfelt apology to all veterans and their families!

Parrish Pond: The Latest Home Showcase

Fashion comes and goes. But true style, like Southampton, is timeless. It's untouched by fads, unfazed by trends. In fact, Southampton is the epitome of style. Founded in 1640, Southampton was New York's first English settlement. And it's had a style all its own ever since.

In the unique environment of Southampton, Parrish Pond is something special. A rare collection of thirty-eight finely appointed traditional homes in a prestigious setting. Parrish Pond is the perfect site for estate residences offering an unparalleled lifestyle. Nestled among sixty acres of prime woodland with breath-taking views of Shinnecock Bay, lush lawns contrast with the beautiful three acre crystalline pond that forms the core of this distinctive collection of finely appointed estate homes.

Each customized residence reflects the personal preferences of its owner along with the utmost in luxury, elegance and convenience. Each residence also embodies the natural beauty, culture and timelessness of Southampton.

Only minutes from some of the most spectacular beaches in all the world, the famous Shinnecock Hills Golf Course, mere footsteps from fashionable shopping and the finest dining experiences imaginable and completely surrounded by the history, ambiance and world-renowned style of Southampton...you'll love to call Parrish Pond home.

With its historic houses and landmarks, museum, diverse architectural heritage, sun-drenched beaches, recreational activities and year-round love of culture, Southampton attracts creative people of all genres – from painters, photographers and musicians to writers, actors, directors and producers. In other words, Southampton is a great place to live in style.

Take a leisurely stroll through the town. You will discover distinctive wine bars where you may find great bouquets of fresh flowers in pitchers made by a local potter. Or explore the dozens of specialty food shops filled with homemade jams, jellies, chutneys, and gourmet delicacies as well as with the pungent smells of aging cheeses and freshly brewed coffee. Sample the quaint ice cream parlors and the little bakeries with wonderful aromas drawing you in like a magnet. And the juice bars offering thick mixtures of fresh fruits in season that are cool refreshers after a hot day at the beach.

Parrish Pond in Southampton is the latest showcase of AVR Homebuilders, one of the New York area's leading developers of great communities where families love to live.

"As with all AVR communities," explains Lori Thomas, Sales Manager, "Parrish Pond offers outstanding quality and value in a range of residence styles. Buyers can choose one of our magnificent homes starting at over 4,000 square feet and located on a one and one half acre wooded lot. They can begin with classical architecture, add a luxurious master bedroom suite with vaulted ceilings plus four additional bedrooms and five and a half baths. Their home can be completed with many personal touches, from handcrafted details to lavish amenities. For peace of mine, we handle every phase of the design and construction process to craft a custom work of art uniquely tailored to the buyer's needs, all built with pure Southampton style."

Despite the spectacular location and outstanding features and amenities, prices at Parrish Pond start at just $1.2 million, including land. Sites only are currently being offered starting at $500,000, and select lots feature bay views.

For more information about living in a masterpiece residence at Parrish Pond, call 631-287-6005 to make an appointment. The Parrish Pond sales office is open every day from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and is conveniently located just minutes from town. –Maria Tennariello
